J. M. GANTT IS ARRESTED ON HIS ARRIVAL IN MARIETTA; HE VISITED FACTORY SATURDAY

Gantt Protests His Innocence, Declaring He Knows Nothing of the Crime – Says He Went to Factory Saturday to Get Pair of Shoes Left There–His Statement Is Confirmed by Superintendent Frank

DECLARES HE KNEW MARY PHAGAN BUT HAD NOT HARMED HER

It Is Not Known What Was Purpose of His Visit to Marietta Monday – His Whereabouts Sunday Not Yet Explained –Story of His Arrest and What He Says

J. M. Gantt, who was discharged three weeks ago from the position of bookkeeper at the National Pencil company, was arrested shortly before noon Monday at Marietta in connection with the murder of Mary Phagan.

He is the man for whom the police were searching during Monday forning, but whose name they refused to divulge. He was arrested by Bailiff Hicks, of Marietta, just as he stepped from a street car in which he had come from Atlanta.

Gantt protests his innocence, and says that he knows nothing whatever of the murder of Mary Phagan. He admits having gone to the factory of the National Pencil company on Saturday afternoon for shoes that he had left there, but denies that he returned to the factory or was with Mary Phagan at any time during the day.

In a brief statement which he made at Marietta he said that he knew the murdered girl, but that they were not inimate friends. He explained that after getting the pair of shoes from the factory, he went home and remained there during the night, and that he had no knowledge of the murder until Sunday morning.

It is not known what he did on Sunday, and his visit t Marietta is unexplained. He took the street car from Atlanta, and was arrested as he arrived at Marietta by Bailiff Hicks, who had been notified that Gantt was wanted by the Atlanta police.

Superintendent Frank, of the National Pencil factory, corroborates Gantt's story about the visit Saturday afternoon to the factory. He says that about 6 o'clock in the evening Gantt came to the factory and asked permission to get an old pair of shoes that he had left there before his discharge.

PERMISSION GRANTED.

The negro night watchman, Newt Lee, asked the superintendent whether Gantt should be permitted to get the shoes, and the permission was granted. But when the superintendent had reached home about 7:30 o'clock, he grew uneasy. He telephoned to the office to know when Gantt left, and Newt Lee, the watchman, answered that the bookkeeper took his departure immediately after getting the shoes.

This is all that officials or employees of the factory know of Gantt's movements, and the police have little further information.

When they learned on Monday morning that Gantt had visited the pencil factory on the day of the murder and that he was an acquaintance of Mary Phagan's they imediately set out to find him.

Two detectives, accompanied by an employee of the factory who knew Gantt, went to the Terminal station searching for him, and the hunt for the bookkeeper was carried on in other parts of the city. But until he was arrested at Marietta by Bailiff Hicks, nothing had been seen of the bookkeeper who the police believe can throw light on the murder of the fourteen-year-old girl.

Detective Hazelitt has gone to Marietta to bring Gantt to Atlanta.

ELMER DARDEN BASES PLEAS FOR LIFE SOLELY ON "UNWRITTEN LAW," SAYING HE SHOT BECAUSE HOME WAS RUINED

Depending on the "unwritten law alone to save his life, Elmer T. Darden went on trial in the criminal division of the Fulton superior court Monday morning for the murder of Cossie M. Goddard, of Stone Mountain, on March 13.

Darden has admitted following his wife's alleged paramour to kill him, and asks a jury to justify the homicide solely and simply because he says that the dead man wrecked his home and happiness.

This is the first time in a number of years that a defendant has pleaded the unwritten law as a sole defense for a homicide in this county, although the supreme court records are replete with "unwritten law cases" from other counties in Georgia.

SNAG IN GETTING JURY.

Darden went on trial at 9:20 o'clock, but it was nearly noon before a jury had been selected. Of the forty-eight jurors who had been summoned to the court, eighteen men declared that they were conscientiously opposed to capital panishment and were excused for cause. All but seven of the remaining talesmen were stricken and court bailiffs spent the remainder of the morning in securing two new panels from which the necessary five jurors were selected.

HERE ARE THE JURORS.

The twelve men who will decide Darden's fate are W. N. Baldwin, S. S. Seeley, Jr., J. H. Sadler, C. B. Logan, J. O. Skinner, George W. Coffee, F. P. Baskin, R. F. Carroll, R. H. Ewing, W. W. Smith, L. B. Story and T. L. Clements.

MAID DESCRIBES KILLING.

Addie Mays, a negro maid at the Union depot, where the targedy occurred, was the state's first witness, and she graphically described the killing.

"It was about 11:20 o'clock at night," she said, "when Mr. Goddard, with both hands raised above his head, came rushing into the ladies' parlor, and shouted, 'Save me! Cave me!'"

"I had already heard two shots and Mr. Darden came in right behind Mr. Goddard. Mr. Darden had a smoking pistol in his hand.

"Pleased to meet you, Mr. Goddard," he said, "I have been searching for you for all the afternoon."

THIRD SHOT FIRED.

"Then he shot again and I saw the blood spurt from Mr. Goddard's face."

John Beasley, a negro porter, swore he heard Darden say, after the shooting, that Goddard had wrecked his home.

"Fire was all I hadto give him," the negro swore that Darden said. "And I tried to give him all of it I had.

"I was looking at you when you registered this morning at the Empire hotel with my wife." The negro said the slayer added.

Policeman J. C. Hardy declared on the witness stand that Goddard was still standing and that he and Darden had clinched, when he (Hardy) rushed in the room, after hearing the shots.

"I'VE SHOT THIS SCOUNDREL."

"Here I am Hardy," the officer said Darden shouted, "take this gun, I have shot this scoundrel."

Godard, who was still holding Darden, told the officer to take the man, and at the same time remarked that he was dying, according to the policeman.

Later Officer Hardy says that Darden said that he hoped that Godard's wounds would prove fatal.

RELATIONS WITH WOMAN.

"Darden then told me," said the officer, "that Goddard had been intimate with rMs. Darden for three years and that he was the father of her last child."

A physician from the Grady hospital, Dr. G. Sellman, testified that Goddard was shot three times, once in the face, once in the left hand and that a third bullet lodged in his abdomen. Either the bullet in the face or the abdomen would have caused death, he said.

Interesting among the witnesses was Mrs. J. B. Harwell, matron at the station for the Travelers' Aid society.

She saw Darden enter the station, she says, and heard two of the shots.

The next thing she remembers, she testified, was climbing into the door of a Pullman car, which was standing on one of the tracks under the shed.

MOTHER OF SLAIN MAN THERE.

A pathetic feature of the trial was the presence of the aged mother of the deceased, and three of the children of the slayer. Mrse. Robert M. Goddard, a widow, whose only support was taken from her by Darden's shots, was seated at the table with her personal counsel, Paul Lindsay, and Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, who conducted the prosecution.

At the table with the allege murderer were Mrs. May Pierce, nineteen-year-old daughter of Darden; Fred Darden, seventeen years old, and Naoni Darden, twelve, the latter a little school girl.

CHILDREN DEPEND FATHER.

The three oldest children have sided with their father in his attack on the character of their mother, who did not appear in the court room. The Dardens have three other children, all of whom are younger than the three in court.

STATE RESTS ITS CASE.

The state rested its case shortly before 1 o'clock, having consumed only an hour in the actual hearing of testimony, and then Judge L. S. Roan, who was presiding, ordered a recess until 2 o'clock.

POLICE THINK NEGRO WATCHMAN CAN CLEAR MURDER MYSTERY; FOUR ARE NOW UNDER ARREST

Developments in Case Have Come Thick and Fast Monday but No Evidence Has Yet Been Developed Which Fixes the Atrocious Crime – Mullinax Seems to Have Proved Alibi

SUPERINTENDENT FRANK AIDS POLICE IN TRYING TO SOLVE THE MYSTERY

He Was Closely Questioned for Several Hours Monday but Left Headquarters in Company With His Attorneys and Friends–Crime Was Committed in Metal Room on Second Floor–Sleeping Compartment Found in Factory Basement

Detectives expect to wring the secret of Mary Phagan's murder from Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil factory, 37-39 South Forsyth street.

Their theory is that he is innocent of the crime itself, but that he knows the murderer of the fourteen-year-old girl, and is shielding the man who strangled Mary Phagan with a piece of hempen cord on Saturday and dragged her body into the pitch black cellar of the factory.

The negro will tell nothing, but from him and from J. M. Gantt, the discharged bookkeeper, detectives expect to draw the story of how Mary Phagan was beaten into unconsciousness, assaulted, and then strangled to death.

FOUR ARE UNDER ARREST.

Four men are under arrest: Lee, the negro night watchman; Gantt, who was discharged three weeks ago by the company; Arthur Mullinax, of 62 Poplar street, and Gordon Bailey, a negro elevator boy at the pencil factory.

L. M. Frank, superintendent of the pencil factory, was questioned by the police, and spent the better part of Monday morning at police station. But he was not placed under arrest, and at noon returned home.

An alibi has practically been established for Mullinax by Jim Rutherford, with whom he boarded, and the police have no direct evidence against Gordon Bailey, the elevator boy.

They are depending upon Newt Lee, the watchman, and upon Gantt, the discharged bookkeeper, for a solution of the mystery which shrouds the murder of the fourteen-year-old girl.

SLEEPING COMPARTMENT.

An improvised cot, fashioned from wooden boxes pushed close togeiher and covered with crocus bags, was discovered in a separate compartment in the basement at the rear end near where the dead body of the girl was found. The compartment which is about eight or ten feet wide runs about half the length of the building and the ground is soggy with dampness.

Just inside, and to the left of the door at the back end, is the cot. In the ground near it were discovered two small footprints, that are believed to be those of a woman. The belief is now that the girl was lured here, assaulted and then murdered and her body dragged to the spot outside where it was found lying face downward in a pool of blood.

Through the discovery of this cot the police are led to believe that it has been used as a place of rendezvous.

The watchman discovered the place Sunday and pointed it out to newspaper men who discovered the tell-tale footprints through the aid of lanterns in the ill smelling, damp and dismal place.

It is the theory of the police that the negro, Newt Lee, knew of the place.

The negro fireman, William Nolle, who has been in the employ of the company for two months, denied most emphatically any knowledge of the existence of the rendezvous.

Investigations Monday morning proved that Mary Phagan was murdered in the metal room, on the second floor of the factory, and that her body was lowered in the elevator to the basement, and was dragged across the oozy, slimy floor of the cellar to the corner where it was found lying face upward between 3 and 4 o'clock Sunday morning.

They are not sure of the time at which the child was murdered, but they believe that she met her death at midnight instead of Saturday afternoon or Saturday evening.

BELIEVES WATCHMAN KNOWS.

The negro night watchman was on duty during the later afternoon and throughout the night, and they are convinced that he must know how the crime was committed. As soon as he can be made to tell his story, detectives believe that they will have the full account of how the girl was murdered.

Blood upon the floor in the metal room, and strands of hair found in the machinery of a lathe, establish the fact that Mary Phagan met her death there instead of in the cellar.

With inhuman ferocity she was attacked, beaten into unconsciousness and her murder completed by the hempen rope twisted about her throat.

Newt Lee, the watchman, remained in the building throughout the night, but he says that he heard no screams, that he knew nothing of the murder in the metal room, and that he neither saw nor heard the murderer as the dead body of Mary Phagan was placed in the elevator, lowered to the cellar, and dragged across the wet damp floor to the corner where it was found.

The police place no belief in his professed ignorance. They think that he must know who murdered the girl, and who bore the body to the cellar.

They are also entertaining the theory that the murderer must have had assistance in lowering the body to the basement, and that perhaps the negro watchman lent his aid.

NEGRO KEEPS HIS TONGUE.

The negro's silence has been proof against all questions, but the police are confident that he has the whole story at his tongue's end and that he will eventually clear the mystery.

The third degree for the watchman and an examination of Gantt, the discharged bookkeeper, are the means through which the police mean to discover the murderer of Mary Phagan.

Their efforts Monday morning bore fruit chiefly in the arrest of Gantt, and the discovery of facts which seem to tassure the negro's knowledge of the murder.

They first discovered that the girl had been murdered upon the second floor and her body lowered to the basement; they next found that Gantt had visited the factory on Saturday afternoon, and they finally effected his arrest at Marietta.

SUPERINTENDENT IS QUESTIONED.

Other developments of the day were chiefly random investigations. L. M. Frank, superintendent of the pencil factory, was questioned at police station during the gerater part of the morning and a stenographic record was kept of his answers. So rigid was this examination that Mr. Frank employed Luther Rosser and Herbert Haas to represent him in his appearance before the police. But no charges were made against him, and at the conclusion of his examination he returned home.

The coroner's jury met and made a personal investigation of the metal room where Mary Phagan was murdered and the cellar where her body was found. But the examination of witnesses was deferred until Wednesday.

FRANK LEAVES STATION.

At 12:15 o'clock Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the National Pencil company's plant in which fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan was murdered some time Sunday morning, left police headquarters in the company of his lawyers and a number of friends. Before leaving he had confronted Arthur Mullinax, the street car conductor, whom the police were holding under suspicion, and had declared that he never saw Mullinax before that moment. Also, he had helped the police to clarify the recollec-

STRAND OF HAIR IN MACHINE ON SECOND FLOOR MAY BE CLEW LEFT BY MARY PHAGAN

Its Discovery Leads to Theory That She May Have Been Attacked There and Then Dragged to Factory Basement

The finding of half a dozen strands of hair in the cogs of a steel lathe in the metal room on the second floor of the National Pencil company's factory, and the discovery of blood splotches on the floor, early Monday morning, aroused the belief that this was the scene of the murder of fourteen-year-old Mray Phagan, Sunday morning. There were no other evidences of a death struggle here, but there was little in the room that could have been disturbed by a combat.

The hair is of the same shade as that of the murdered girl.

A cunning effort had been made to conceal the blood stains on the floor by the smearing of some kind of a powder over the surface. A single drop of congealed blood was found, however, by a Journal reporter, and a further investigation revealed more.

In the absence of contradictory evidence, it is now the belief that the girl was killed in this room and her body then dragged to the opening in the first floor, where it was lowered to the basement. This tends to implicate more than one murderer, as the girl weighed nearly 150 pounds.

CALLED THERE FOR PAY?

Miss Phagan formerly worked in the metal room in which she is believed to have met death. She and four other girls were employed there in manufacturing the metal caps which fasten the rubber erasers to the ends of pencils.

On last Tuesday, because of a shortage in material, she and her companions were laid off by L. A. Quinn, foreman of the shop. They were to return to work when metal arrived.

On Friday, Foreman Quinn endeavored to locate Miss Phagan and her three companions. He wanted to tell them to call for their pay on Friday, as Saturday, the regular payday, was a holiday. Owing to the fact that the dead girl could not be reached by telephone, she was not notified of the change in date, and on Saturday she went to the factory expecting to get her money.

What she did after her arrival has not yet been determined by the police.

Miss Phagan was the stepdaughter of J. W. Coleman. Her mother was prostrate with grief on Sunday when, after spending a sleepless night worrying over her daughter's unexplained absence, she was told that the girl was the victim of one of the most atrocious murders in the criminal history of Atlanta. Sunday night she became hysterical and physicians were summoned.

The girl also has three brothers. Two live in Atlanta, and one joined the navy but six months ago.

NEGRO FOUND BODY.

Newt Lee, negro nightwatchman, discovered the body of the girl at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning. He called the police, who hastened to the scene in an automobile. The black met the machine and told an animated, incoherent story of how he had stumbled on the body in the darkness of the basement. His manner aroused immediate suspicion in the minds of the officers, and he was later taken into custody. He denies knowledge of the crime, however.

The limbs of the corpse had grown rigid, but the blood which had flowed from the deep wound on the girl's head was still damp.

Other evidences of murder were all the victim was found forty feet away. It was saturated with blood. Another handkerchief a man's—was found beside the body. It, too, was soaked in blood.

A belt and a pocketbook, identified as belonging to the murdered girl, were found in the elevator shaft.

MISSED HANDMADE LUNCH.

Her mesh handbag, said to have contained a few dollars in cash and valueless personal effects, was missing, however, though she was said to have taken it from home with her.

On her wrist was a plain gold bracelet. It was bent, and was splotched with blood. Upon a finger of her left hand was a small signet ring upon which was engraved the letter "M."

It was 6 o'clock Sunday morning before the girl was identified. Miss Grace Hicks, one of the girls employed in the factory, was brought to the scene in an automobile. She swooned as soon as she saw the senseless form and battered face of her former companion.

"It's Mary Phagan," she sobbed a moment later. "Poor Mary!"

A few hours later detectives reached the conclusion that the girl had been dragged before the metal machine, either while in the factory or before her arrival there. An examination showed that a criminal assault had preceded the homicide.

A crude garrotte, manufactured of two strips of underclothing torn from the girls dress, had been used to choke her. Apparently it had been placed about her neck and then twisted.

One of the theories of the police is that the girl and her later murderer (or murderers) entered the building through the fourth street entrance, and that the perpetrators of the crime left through a rear door. This theory is borne out by the fact that a door permitting egress through an alley to West Hunter street was forced open. The staple holding the lock was torn from the woodwork.

HANDWRITING NOT KNOWN.

Efforts to identify the penmanship of the notes found by the dead girl's side failed. Samples of her handwriting, of Mullinax's and of that of the night watchman, all failed to agree with it. If either of the men wrote the message they successfully disguised their handwriting; if the girl really did write the missives, she did so in the throes of approaching death. One of the notes was pencilled on an order blank of the factory.

NEGRO'S STORY UNSHAKEN.

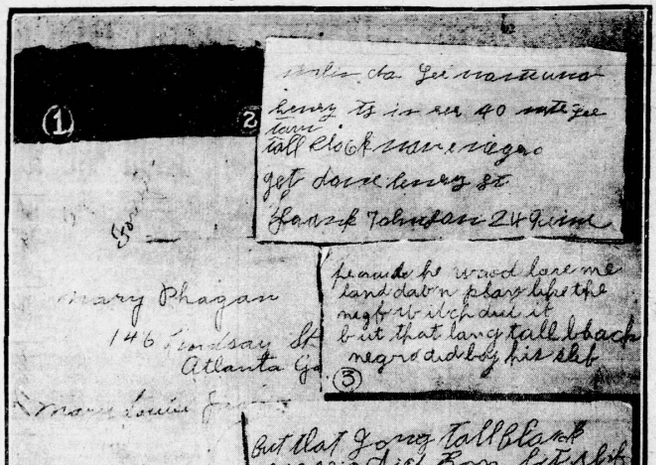
Newt Lee, negro nightwatchman, held as a suspect in solitary confinement, denied absolutely any knowledge of the crime. Without weakening or changing his first statements, in any way, the the black stood several severe grillings at the hands of the police Sunday. His story was not shaken.

Accompanied by reporters and detectives, he was taken Sunday to the basement in the pencil factory where he discovered the remains of the pretty girl. In pantomime he re-enacted the finding of the body.

A detective lay on the floor in the exact spot where the body was found. The lights were turned out and the negro told to depict his actions earlier in the morning. While the small audience looked on, the black descended the ladder through the trap door out side. He remained there a few moments and then walked over to the side of the side of the detective.

"That's the way it happened," he said. The police admit that the negro's tale of the finding of the body is plausible and possible.

Writing in Incoherent Notes Is Not Like That of Dead Girl



1.—Mary Phagan's own handwriting, as shown in her address she wrote for Sunday school teacher.
2.—Written by Lee at suggestion of detectives for purpose of comparison.
3.—One of notes found in cellar.
4.—Also written by Lee at suggestion of detectives.

MAN HELD FOR GIRL'S MURDER AVOWS HE WAS WITH ANOTHER WHEN WITNESS SAW HIM LAST

Arthur Mullinax, Trolley Conductor, Denies That E. L. Sentell Saw Him Saturday Night With Mary Phagan

Arthur Mullinax, identified by E. L. Sentell, of 52 Davis street, clerk for the Kamper Grocery company, as the man whom he saw with Mary Phagan, the murdered girl, at midnight Saturday, vehemently denies any part in the atrocious crime, and declares that he will be able to prove an alibi. Subjected to a quizzing in the office of Chief of Police Beavers, he told an apparently straightforward story of his actions on the night preceding the finding of the body. Investigation of his statement by the police, however, developed discrepancies, they say. He is held in solitary confinement on a tentative charge of suspicion.

Sentell, who was an acquaintance of the dead girl, told the police that he saw her at Forsyth and Hunter streets with Mullinax at 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning. He said he spoke to her and that the former street car man tipped his hat in response to the salutation.

In the presence of Chief Beavers, Chief of Detectives Lanford, Police Captain Mayo and Detective Black, the clerk and Mullinax were brought face to face. The clerk reiterated his identification. Pointing at the prisoner, he said:

"That is the man who was with the girl last night. I'm positive. There's no doubt about it."

"It's false! It's a lie!" cried the man accused. "I was at home asleep, and I can prove it."

Sentell never wavered in his contention, however.

"WAS WITH ANOTHER."

Mullinax told the police following his arest Sunday, that he had called on a girl friend, Miss Pearl Robinson, who lives in Bellwood avenue, and later accompanied her to the Bijou theater.

"We came downtown on an English avenue car, got off at Marietta and Forsyth streets, and went directly to the theater. We arrived at about the middle of the first show and left about the middle of the second. Then we boarded a car and I took the girl home. The only time I was near the intersection where Sentell says he saw me with Miss Phagan was when I took the car with Miss Robinson."

A coincidence in the case is the fact that Miss Robinson wore the same kind of a dress and is of the same size and appearance as the murdered girl. Friends of Mullinax declare that this shows that Sentell is mistaken in his identification.

"When we arrived at Miss Robinson's house we talked for awhile," Mullinax said in his cell. "I guess I stayed there for fifteen minutes. Then I went home. I room at 60 Poplar street, in Bellwood. When I got there I gave Mrs. Emma Rutherford, my landlady, a dollar which I owed her. She slipped it under her pillow. I went to bed then, and didn't know of the murder until Sunday morning."

THE VITAL FLAW.

In this part of the suspect's statement the police believe they have picked a vital flaw. Mrs. Rutherford, they say declares that Mullinax did not come home Saturday night and pay her a dollar.

"He gave it to me Saturday at noon" she said.

In his cell at the jail Mullinax is denied to all callers. Although obviously perturbed over his arrest, he has remained cool and has told time and time again the same story of his actions on the night of the crime.

To reporters he said that he had known the murdered girl but casually. He denied that he had become acquainted with her on her frequent rides on his car between the pencil factory and her home. This, also, is in contravention of other testimony in the hands of the police, officials declare. It is said that witnesses have seen the two in earnest conversations between Miss Phagan and Mullinax on the street car of which the suspect was motorman. These are not come under the designation of casual acquaintance.

MEET AT CHURCH SOCIAL.

"I met her at a social in Western Heights Baptist church last Christmas," said the prisoner. "That is the only time I ever saw her. Anybody that says I was a good friend of hers, lies. Why, I was never even introduced to the girl. We didn't look past in the entertainment. She depicted 'Sleeping Beauty' in a playlet. I did a black-face act and sang in a quartet.

"During the show I was standing in the wings waiting for my turn to go on. Miss Phagan came up to me.

"'You look fine in black face,' she said to me. Then I said. 'Then I'll keep my face black always.' It was a joke." Thus the alleged murderer as he smiled grimly.

Mullinax said that that was the last time he had seen the girl to talk to her.

"I haven't been around the factory much. I never saw her Saturday night. My arrest is all a horrible mistake, but I'm not worrying much, because the police can't hold an innocent man long—and I am an innocent man."

Samples of Mullinax's handwriting were compared with that of the notes found by the dead girl's body in the pencil factory basement. The penmanship did not tally.

CORONER'S JURY VISITS SCENE OF MURDER ADD ADJOURNS WITHOUT RENDERING VERDICT

Will Meet Again Wednesday Morning When Witnesses Will Be Examined—Five Hundred People Present When Inquest Was Begun

For an hour Monday morning a jury empaneled by Coroner Paul Donahue groped through dark basement passageways and first floor rooms in the factory of the National Pencil company hunting for evidence that would aid them in reaching a verdict as to who murdered pretty Mary Phagan. At the end of their hunt the body adjourned. They will meet again Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock to continue their investigation.

Many witnesses who can throw a light on the actual crime, the actions of the dead girl or of the suspects under arrest will be examined then. It is probable, also, that the prisoners now held in jail also will testify.

The jury met at P. J. Bloomfield's undertaking chapel, 84 South Pryor street, shortly after 10 o'clock. It was composed of Messrs. J. C. Hood, Clarence Langford, Glenn Dewberry, Homer C. Ashford, John Miller and C. Y. Sheets. Mr. Ashford was foreman.

The first official act of the jury was to view the remains of the 14-year-old girl. Behind closed doors the coroner's salesmen inspected the fatal wounds and bruises on the girl's body.

No witnesses were called. One or two who had been told by the police to be present were excused and told to report again Wednesday morning. They and many others probably will be heard at that time.

A throng of 500 persons had gathered at the undertaking parlors to hear the inquest. They were excluded by the police and, when the jury, headed by Coroner Donahue, finally left the funeral parlors for the scene of the murder, the investigators had to elbow and shoulder their way across a crowd-banked sidewalk.

Every inch of ground, every thing that has been mentioned in connection with the case were examined by the jurors in the pencil factory.

They were accompanied by three or four policemen on their tour, and the many details of the mystery given them to unravel, if possible. Once in their investigation a lantern was placed on the spot on the basement floor where Newt Lee, negro night watchman, says another lantern was sitting when he discovered the body. Apparently there was doubt in the minds of some of the jurors as to whether or not it would be possible for one standing where the negro said he stood to see a body. What the consensus of opinion among the investigators was is not known, however.

Shovels, tools, pieces of wood and other objects lying in the basement were examined for evidence that there had been possible weapons in the attack upon the girl. The search along this line was fruitless.

The jury viewed the machine room in the second story, upon the floor of which blood stains were found Monday morning. They saw the lathe to which a few strands of hair were found clinging by a workman. They visited the lavatory and several other rooms in the building. At the conclusion of the search no juror expressed an opinion. They will reserve their judgment until the conclusion of the inquest. This probably will be on Wednesday.

Thousands Visit Morgue To View Girl's Body

Six thousand people, according to reliable estimates, visited P. J. Bloomfield's undertaking parlors Monday morning to view the body of Mary Phagan. It was the largest crowd, police say, that had ever viewed a murder victim's body in Atlanta. Scores of friends, hundreds of acquaintances and fellow-workers in the pencil factory and thousands of simply curious walked around the bier between 7 o'clock and noon. So far as known, no relatives appeared. The mother of the girl is ill at her home as a consequence of her daughter's death and other members of the family are at her bedside.

In the endless line in and out of the undertaker's establishment were old men and young men and old women and young women. There were women with babes in their arms and fathers with their sons. And there were dozens of girls who worked in the pencil factory.

"It's Mary,—it is Mary," sobbed one girl as she clasped the lifeless face of her former companion in her arms. She had found her friends' death, but was overcome with grief when she looked on the lifeless body of the pretty, fourteen-year-old girl.

There was little emotion displayed on the faces of most of those who called, though frequently they had come just out of curiosity.

TWO MAUNDERING NOTES ADD MYSTERY TO CRIME.

City detectives, detailed to run down the murderer or murderers of fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan, are endeavoring to clear up the mystery surrounding the authorship of two crudely written and badly composed notes which were found near the corpse of the murdered girl in the basement of the pencil factory.

These notes were written in lead pencil. They are misspelled, incoherent and nearly unintelligible. They present two questions to the minds of the detectives:

First: Were they really written by the girl while suffering the last throes of a delirious death?

Second: Are they the handiwork of the murderer, to divert suspicion from himself toward a fictitious negro.

One of the notes reads as follows:

"He said he wood love me laid down like the night witch did it but that long tall black negro did by his sleb."

Here is the other:

"mama that negro hired down here did this I went to get water and he pushed me down this hole a long tall negro black that has it woks long lean tall negro I write while play with me."

"GOD'S VENGEANCE WILL STRIKE BRUTE WHO KILLED HER," SAYS GRANDFATHER OF MARY PHAGAN

Calling upon God Almighty to visit speedy vengeance upon the murderer or murderers of his fourteen-year-old granddaughter, Mary Phagan, whose mutilated body was discovered Sunday morning in the basement of the National Pencil company's factory on Forsyth street, W. J. Phagan, an elderly citizen of Marietta, declares that he will never rest until the fiend or fiends are brought to justice.

The old man almost collapsed when he learned of the awful crime, and he sobbed piteously as he prayed for divine aid in clearing up the mystery surrounding the murder of the girl.

"The living God will see to it that the brute is found and punished according to his sin," declared Mr. Phagan. "I hope the murderer will be dealt with as he has dealt with that tender and innocent child. I hope that he suffers anguish and remorse in the same measure that she suffered pain and shame. No punishment is too great for him. Hanging cannot atone for the crime he has committed and the suffering he has caused both to his victim and her relatives."

Mr. Phagan was so overcome that he had to take to his bed, but he declared that he would attend the funeral over the remains of his granddaughter Monday morning. However, his condition was such during the early morning that his relatives feared he would not be strong enough to make the trip to Atlanta and face the ordeal of the inquest.

THE BOOKLOVERS' CAMPAIGN AT YANCEY'S HARDWARE STORE

Two Journal Booklovers interested the Campaign Editor very much in Yancey's Hardware store on Saturday afternoon, though they did not at first know how much that they were talking to a man connected with The Journal. They had come in to see the Majestic Range that The Journal has on exhibition as one of the prizes in the Great $7,000 Booklovers' Campaign, and the Editor dropped in to get a line on a good Booklovers' story. And these ladies are enthusiasts, and while they are out looking at all the prizes, it does not look to us as if either one of them expects to land down in the $65 class, as that is the value of the prizes they were looking at.

The question of pictures published so far came up, and one of the ladies thought they were pretty hard so far, when the other lady opened her handbag and took out the twenty prize pictures, separating them according to the way she looked at them, whether easy or hard, and when she was through they were lined up in this way: In the easy pile there were Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 13, 14, 15, 17 and 19, and in the hard pile there were Nos. 3, 6, 9, 10, 12, 16, 18 and 20. "Now, you take No. 6, for instance. I place that with the hard ones, because there are so many titles that would fit it and be good answers, and I have not decided what ten I will use on that one. You take Nos. 1, 2, 11, 15, 17 and 18 and look them over closely, and you will find them so easy that they almost yell the titles at you.

I think my plan of setting the hard ones to one side and going over them one by one when I have an hour or two to spare is a good one, as I find that pictures that seemed very hard on the first tryout come easy to me the second or third time. Another plan that was suggested in one of the stories is to go through the Catalogue to become familiar with all the titles so that when you see a picture you will remember a title that will just fit. I thoroughly enjoy the work and will feel well repaid for the time devoted to it, no matter what I win. Oh, yes, I am going to win something, and I have visited all the stores and know the prizes and will know just what I am getting when I receive The Journal's order for a prize. Yes, I would rather have that thousand dollars, because I could do a lot of good with it. Good day, gentlemen, I must be getting on home and get dinner ready."

POLICE THINK WATCHMAN CAN CLEAR MYSTERY

tions of Newt Lee, negro night watchman, relative to one incident upon the evening preceding the crime. Lee had told the detectives that J. M. Gantt, formerly a bookkeeper at the plant, calling there Saturday afternoon and being admitted, had stayed in the office only three or four minutes. Under questions by Mr. Frank, the negro said Gantt stayed inside longer than that—long enough to wrap up his old shoes that he had called to get, and to telephone to some girl.

SAW MAN WITH GIRL.

L. T. ("Charley") Hall, in charge of the automobile trucks of the city sanitary department, told the detectives that he took his brother-in-law to the corner of Forsyth and Alabama streets, a block north of the pencil factory, at midnight Saturday to put him aboard the last East Point car. After the car left Hall entered the soda and cigar establishment on the opposite corner, west side of Forsyth, and while there, at about 12:05 o'clock, he saw a couple going down the street toward the pencil factory. The man, said he, seemed to fit the description given to him of Gantt. He had seen the man before around the plant, said he, when he went there with the sanitary trucks. He had looked on him as some sort of an official. Recently for a couple of weeks he had not seen him. He was with a girl, whose dress reached just to her shoe tops. Hall thinks the girl wore white shoes. He thought no more of it until he read of the murder.

A woman whom no one could identify, called detective headquarters upon the above Monday morning and asked if Mullinax, the trolley car conductor, was under arrest. Detective Hollingsworth informed her in the affirmative, and asked if she knew anything of the case. She answered "Yes," said he, but hung up before he could get any further replies from her.

FACTORY IS CLOSED.

Owing to the feeling of unrest and intense excitement that prevailed among the women employes at the National Pencil company's plant Monday morning while detectives were making further investigations into the brutal murder and assault of little Mary Phagan, Assistant Superintendent H. A. Schiff ordered the machinery stopped and the place closed for the day.

The girls and women lost no time in getting from their wraps and hats and leaving the scene of the mysterious tragedy that still baffles those investigating the case. All were told, however, to be sure and report on time for work Tuesday morning.

HAIR IS IDENTIFIED.

It is the belief of detectives that an important witness has been discovered in Magnolia Kennedy, the young girl who worked next to Mary Phagan in the metal or pencil-tip room. She will testify that the hair found wrapped around a part of a lathe in this department of the factory with that of Mary A. Phagan, foreman of the room, was also positive that the strands of hair had come from the head of the murdered girl. Other operatives were of the same opinion but not being in the same part of the place were not so certain.

Did the little girl who worked with Mary say what she was not sure about? She was asked point blank if she would swear the strands came from the head of her companion. "I am positive of it," she said, "and will swear to it if necessary."

While detectives, newspaper men and onlookers gathered about the lathe in the Magnolia tinted up close to the machine and fixed minutely the shade of the strands. She shuddered. Awe-stricken women stood away from her. Then her voice broke as she spoke of Mary's hair," she almost whispered. "I know it."

BLOOD SPOTS FOUND.

Across the room from the lathe, spots of blood were found on the floor near a wooden closet built out from the wall near a door that led into an other department of the factory.

The largest spot was four or five inches in diameter and around it were smaller splotchings. Detectives and Chief of Police Beavers chiseled up sections of the flooring to get a better look, and found that the stain of blood was made by dipping the stained piece of wood into the fluid. It was not noticeable as the wood was dark and had been, and did not discolor the contents of the glass. This test satisfied the officers that the spots were blood from the head of the murdered girl.

Employes of the factory stated positively that the spots were not there Friday afternoon when the room was swept out.

Mullinax Was at Home On Night of Tragedy

Jim Rutherford, of 62 Poplar street, at whose home Arthur Mullinax has boarded for the past four months, declared emphatically Monday afternoon that Mullinax was in the house from 10:25 Saturday night and that he left him there at 2 o'clock Sunday morning at 5 o'clock when he left home.

Rutherford is a member of the Lazarus baseball team and came to Atlanta Saturday at 2 p. m. He went directly home to see Mullinax but he was not there. About 7 o'clock in the evening, he went to the Terminal station to meet the manager of the ball team.

"When I reached the station," said Rutherford, "I saw Arthur and his sweetheart, Miss Pearl Robinson. At about theater time I was standing on corner of Peachtree and Marietta street and saw the couple get off of an Edgewood avenue car and go into the Bijou theater. I read that play until 10:25 and ten minutes later Mullinax came in and went to bed.

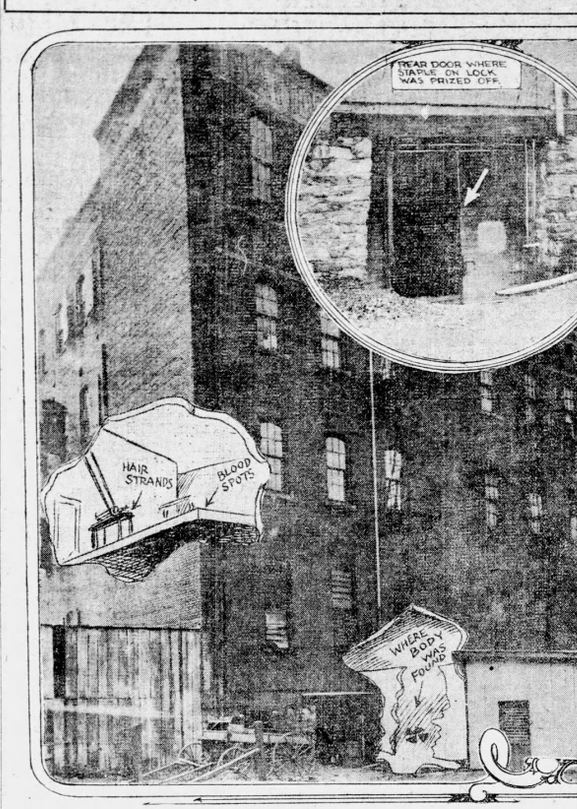
"Some time later I went into his room to see if he was asleep. He was almost asleep and mumbling a few words gave me no. I sat down in a chair and went to sleep. I don't know how later my older brother came in and we talked baseball for a while. He then retired and I slept in the chair until 5 o'clock when I got up and went to bed also. At 5 o'clock I arose and looking in Mullinax's room found him sound asleep. I left him there. He came some time later and went out also, but before leaving drew a dollar on my mother's bed in part payment on some clothes. This was before she had waked up and was not found until later by one of the girls.

"Mullinax has always been a quiet unassuming fellow and was not inclined to stay out late at night. I know that he came directly home after leaving Miss Robinson at her door."

British Officer Dead

LONDON, April 28.—Lieutenant Rogers Harrison, of the British army's aviating corps, was killed while flying at Farnborough early today. He was attempting a steep descent from a height of 400 feet when the elevator of his biplane collapsed under the strain and his machine crashed to earth. Harrison was killed instantly.

BUILDING WHERE GIRL WAS MURDERED



The above photograph shows the rear of the building occupied by the plant of the National Pencil factory where fourteen-year-old Mary Phagan was found early Sunday morning, cold in death, her head battered and a piece of twine about her neck. In the upper right hand corner is shown the back door leading into the death chamber, a dismal hole reeking with the smell of damp earth that appears never to be dry. It was out of this door that the staple holding the hasp was drawn, apparently from the inside, which indicated, according to the detectives, that the assailant made his escape this way. There is a board runway from the entrance to the ground floor of the basement and it was at the extreme end of this that the body of the murdered girl was found as shown above. Strands of golden hair, sworn by Little Magnolia Kennedy, who worked in the metal room with the slain girl, to belong to her, were found entwined from a projection of the bench lathe shown on the second floor. Across the room, just at the corner of a small closet were found the spots on the floor, later determined to be blood when particles of the board were tested in alcohol by Chief of Police Beavers. Employes of the factory stated most emphatically that the spots were not there after the room had been swept out Friday afternoon.

J. M. Gantt, discharged bookkeeper of the National Pencil company, in Atlanta, Monday morning, Deputy Sheriff Hazelett, armed with a warrant charging the man with the crime, took him in charge and placed him in the Marietta jail. The warrant was sworn out in Atlanta by Detective Ozburn, of the local police force.

While Gantt is incarcerated, Hazelett is making further investigations, the nature of which he declines to divulge, stating, however, that still further developments might be expected. When he has completed his investigation, he will return to Atlanta with the prisoner.

DUNBAR KIDNAPING MYSTERY IS GROWING

Photographs of Child Found With Walters Identified as Both Dunbar and Anderson

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—Another feature of uncertainty as to the identity of the child in the Dunbar kidnaping case was added today to the maze of conflicting evidence in the receipt here of photographs which W. C. Walters, the alleged kidnaper, sent to his father, J. P. Walters, at Boardman, N. C., several months ago.

The photograph of a child which Walters sent his aged father and which he claimed was that of little Bruce Anderson, son of a woman living near Boardman, is declared by persons living in that vicinity to be a true likeness of the Anderson child.

Numerous persons in New Orleans examined the photograph today and declared it is the same boy that was taken from Walters in Columbia, Miss., last week and which Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dunbar identified as their missing son.

W. H. Murray, a rural mail carrier, on whose route J. P. Walters, father of the alleged kidnaper, lives near Boardman, writes that he knew the child, Bruce Anderson, well before Walters carried it away and that a year ago and in an affidavit declares he is positive in the identification of the photograph sent by Walters as that of the Anderson boy.

In a letter which Walters wrote Julia Anderson, mother of Bruce, he mentioned that he had had some trouble about a boy whom he had lost, but assured her boy was safe and happy with him.

If the child found with Walters is the kidnaped Robert Dunbar, the authorities want to know what has become of Bruce Anderson and detectives are searching through Mississippi and Louisiana, following the old haunts of Walters, in the hope of thoroughly clearing the mystery which has grown deeper from day to day.

Lovesick Prince's Suicide

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ROME, April 28.—Prince Vincent of Windisch-Graetz, aged thirty, attached to the Austro-Hungarian embassy, has committed suicide. He went in a motor car to a place called the Latin Tomb, in the outskirts of Rome, and shot himself in the head with a revolver. An affair of the heart was the cause which led him to take his life.

Hereditary Prince Vincent Alfred Guillaume Marie Gabriel was the only son of the prince of Windisch-Graetz. He had three sisters. The family is one of the oldest in Austria-Hungary, and it ruled in the principality which was absorbed in Wurtemberg in 1806, at the time of the formation of the Federation of the Rhine. Six years ago Prince Vincent entered the head office of the Dresden bank for a period of two months as a "volunteer," or unpaid clerk, with the object of familiarizing himself with the details of a financial business. Even in these democratic days a prince as a bank clerk is a novelty, and the incident caused much discussion on the continent.

MISSOURI INSURANCE COMPANIES RESTRAINED

(By Associated Press.)

JEFFERSON CITY, April 28.—The state supreme court today issued an injunction restraining 182 fire insurance companies from terminating contracts now in force. The court did not enjoin the companies from ceasing to write new business in the state.

The companies were given ten days to show why they should not be fined for threatening to leave the state, and to show cause why they should not be enjoined permanently from cancelling present contracts. Judges Brown, Bond and Walker dissented.

Representatives of the insurance companies when the injunction proceedings were filed by the attorney general on Saturday, said the companies had no intention of cancelling present contracts, but merely would write no new business or renew present contracts after April 30.

Haldane on Education

LONDON, April 28.—"I am a missionary on the cause of a truly national system of education," said Lord Haldane at the conference of National Union Teachers at Weston-super-Mare. This was a system, added the lord chancellor, which would "place one workmen on a level with those of other countries, and do a great deal to abolish the line of demarcation between men who worked with their hands and men who worked with their heads." "The public," said Lord Haldane, "had not yet fully realized how hopeless is the state of our elementary schools in many parts of the country. As to the government's new scheme of education, they would not produce it until they were quite sure of it; otherwise confusion would result. The very root of the problem is that they require a driving force from the nation the problem of education is very largely a problem of money. The government's task is a great one, requiring much money, and necessitating that they shall have the mind of the nation at their back. As regards the training of the national mind, we must keep abreast with other countries, which are reorganizing their educational systems. It is a question of national safety, and nothing less, with which the government is now dealing."

UNWRITTEN LAW INVOKED BY DARDEN ON HIS DEED

Man Who Slew Goddard Says He Killed Deliberate and Defiant Wrecker of His Home

The statement of E. T. Darden, the man who slew C. M. Goddard, was the only defense offered Monday afternoon for the deed that Darden admits he did.

The unwritten law, coupled with an implied plea of self-defense was invoked by the statement, which Darden read from typewritten sheets.

At 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon court recessed for 1h. after the state finished presenting its case. At 2 o'clock it reconvened, and very shortly thereafter Darden went upon the stand and read his statement. Following it were to come the lawyers' arguments and the judge's charge to the jury.

In beginning his statement, Darden reviewed his life, stating that he was born in Virginia, and that in 1894 he married the woman involved in this case. They have seven children. About ten years ago his father left him $35,000. He came to Georgia and bought a quarry near Redan. That was about eight years ago. Among the first new friends they formed were the Goddards. Particularly did they like Mr. Cossie Goddard.

MISFORTUNE BEGAN.

The quarry did not pan out, and in November, 1911, Darden found himself reduced to the necessity of hunting a job. Having assets in the quarry property and equipment, but lacking ready cash. He got a job in Atlanta. His wife grew dissatisfied and quarrelsome. She wanted to move to Atlanta. He begged her to be patient—arguing that they would get out of the woods soon. In February, 1912, she came to Atlanta and spent the day—"at the moving picture shows," she told him that night. She came again, and again. He grew suspicious, because of her manner toward him and the evident waning in her affections. He haunted the moving picture shows. "I wanted to find her alone in a picture show. It would have given me consolation." But he could not drive himself to a confession against her, he said. He began to drink, and lost his job on account of it. She got a position in the Kimball house, over his protest, and told him not to visit her there—that it might be misunderstood. He refrained, but heard that Goddard was seeing her occasionally—but still he believed nothing to be wrong. He went to Spartanburg, S. C., to take another job, and when he returned home after about two weeks his little son told him all was not right. He called on others for the truth, and learned that his wife and Goddard had become the subjects of common gossip. He heard even that Goddard had been boasting.

HE WARNED GODDARD.

Then he met Goddard on the train, and warned him. But Goddard laughed at him and paid no attention. Some time afterward, when his wife was away, as Goddard stepped from an East Lake car; he called the tSone Mountain man "a rotten thief and a scoundrel," and said, "I want you to keep away from my house, and to stay away from that woman and those little children. If you don't I will blow your brains out or you will haveto do the same for me."

But Goddard laughed sardonically, and smarted to walk away, when, said Darden on the stand,

Finally he himself became reduced to a physical wreck, said Darden. For days and weeks prior to the killing he could not sleep nor eat norsamlly, said he.

His statement follows:

"I stood it longer than many men could have stood it. I loved my wife. What was I to do? I had done everything that I knew to do, to stop this man. I couldn't stand still and allow this to go on. I waited until even my little daughter, Mary, told me that Goddard had met my little daughter downtown and told this young girl of his love for her mother. I went to see him at his own little boy. Fred, had told me of Goddard coming to my own home, inquiring where I was not. I was at home, and had stated that if he stood for me that I was not and told my little boy that I was a damn coward, and that he was not afraid of me, and that if I ever crossed his path he would fix me.

FACED DRASTIC MEASURES.

"Having made every effort to protect my wife, my home and my children, having seen with my own eyes, his conduct, and having thoroughly investigated the information obtained from others, I became satisfied that only drastic measures would save my loved ones from annihilation at the hands of Goddard. I knew he had threatened me face to face; I knew of his threats to fix me—made to my friends and fellowers. I knew he was a desperate and lawless character. It was not a man of honor or principle that I had to deal with, but a coward, criminal. He was invading my home, and threatening my life if I undertook to stop him.

"It was wild. Imagine myself in my place, if you can. When I stepped into the depot where I shot Goddard, no one can know the conditions of my mind when I faced this desperate criminal, this man who was the despoiler of my home. He was near the end of the waiting room, where the ladies' toilet is situated. The possibility of my wife's presence there flashed also across my mind. She had been with him. I could not find her. Where was she? There was the man who had threatned my life, if I interfered with his wrecking of my home; he faced me, as I approached, apparently as if to cut off my approach to the ladies' toilet, where I thought my wife was. I was crazy; I saw him in a crimson flash. He knew I was desperate; I believed that the crisis had come, and that the result would be the death of one of us. He moved in such way as made me believe that he was prepared and if I did not act quickly that it would mean my death. And I fired. He turned and fled into the ladies' closet, and then I was sure that my wife must be there, and followed. It was then that where the fatal shot was given. I was not at myself. I knew I was facing the criminal who had made a hell out of my life, and whom I believed was in the act of carrying out his evil designs, and was fleeing with my wife, and who would not stop short of killing me, and I fired repeatedly, under an honest belief that it was a duel to the death, with a desperate criminal, and that safety was in the quickest finger and the surest aim."

Husband Says She Caused Wreck of Home

MRS. E. T. DARDEN,
Whose relations with C. M. Goddard are said to have been the reason for her husband shooting Goddard.

ELMER DARDEN BASES PLEA FOR LIFE ON UNWRITTEN LAW

John Spence McClelland, Attorney John E. McClelland and Attorney William M. Smith.

The participation in the case of Attorney John E. McClelland, who is a city alderman, is especially interesting, as in recent attacks on him it has been charged that he had violated a city ordinance by appearing as counsel for the defense in cases where city officials are the prosecutors. In this instance, W. A. Chewning, a city detective, is the nominal prosecutor of Darden.

Suit Against Mrs. Darden Is Filed While Husband Is Tried

While attorneys in their efforts to save her husband's life were attacking her character in the criminal division of the superior court Monday morning, Deputy Sheriff George, Broadnax was searching for Mrs. Naomi C. Darden to serve her with a civil suit, which may result in the taking from her of the little home in East avenue, in DeKalb county.

The suit has been filed by the Southern Realty company, which alleges that Mrs. Darden has paid none of the sixty-five notes for $20 each, which she gave the company with a small cash payment for the home in which she was living at the time of the tragedy.

The suit seeks to recover the total amount of the notes, $1,300. The first note was due in August, 1912, according to the suit, which was filed by Attorney Grover C. Middlebrooks.

LEARN THE SECRET OF KEEPING YOUNG

Good Digestion Necessary—Mi-o-na for Stomach Ills.

Do you want to be comfortable, and happy until a ripe old age? Do you want to learn the secret of looking and feeling young? It is not much of a secret after all—just give a little more thought to the care of your digestive organs.

Nearly all the diseases affecting mankind have their origin in the stomach and bowels. It is what you eat that causes most of your disturbances.

If you overload the stomach, or take food that does not agree—kicks back, as it were—trouble is indicated by headache, dizziness, sour stomach, gastritis and other symptoms of indigestion. Then it is that you should take Mi-o-na the specific for out-of-order stomachs. Old age is a normal wearing out process. It starts when you overtax or impose on the digestive system. If the stomach and bowels are not right they cannot properly digest your food and you are improperly nourished.

Your resistance is low. You are lacking in vitality when not properly nourished—disease may find you an easy prey. Resistance must be kept up to a normal if old age does not appear before its time.

Protect yourself with Mi-o-na—it is not only a digestor to give prompt relief in acute distress, but is second to none as a stomach and intestinal tonic to build up the tissues, making them well and strong. Always keep Mi-o-na in the house—carry it when traveling—use at the first sign of stomach distress—small tablet, easy to take. Druggists everywhere. 50c a large box. (Advt.)

THE JOURNAL WANTS are far-reaching in their results, almost immediate in action, appealing to all classes that look to the daily paper as the great medium for the diffusion of news and opportunities.

CHAMBERS WROTE MADDOX—J. E. M'CLELLAND DECLARES

And He Promises Reply, at Probe Tuesday Afternoon, to Both of Them

Alderman John E. McClelland has returned to Atlanta from Stone Mountain, where he spent several days last week, and went to a private sanitarium Monday morning.

When called there over the telephone and asked if he had any reply to Alderman Maddox's letter, printed last week, he said he would be present Tuesday afternoon when the committee commenced the investigation of his charges, and would at that time make such reply as the occasion and the circumstances demanded.

"You can quote me as saying Mr. Aldine Chambers wrote the Maddox letter, if you want to," said he, "and therefore what I have to say will apply to him as well as to Mr. Maddox. I would like for him to be present Tuesday afternoon."

RENEWED BEAR PRESSURE CAUSED BREAK IN COTTON

Market in New York Closed 6 to 13 Points Down From the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 28.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 6 points to an advance of 2 points on the trading active and the tone unsettled owing to the circulation of May notices which were estimated at from 50,000 to 75,000 bales. Brokers supported to be operating for both local and foreign houses were heavy buyers of May against sales of July, however, and these indications that the notices would be stopped, steadied the market shortly after the call with the old crop selling at a point or two above Saturday's closing. The new crop months also follow the old crop rally owing to favorable weather and crop news.

The early rally carried prices about 8 to 12 points net higher. There was, however, no aggressive bull support and the market later in the morning was unsettled under scattering old crop liquidation and bear pressure, with new crop positions making new low records for the movement and selling about 6 to 7 points net lower, while the near crop months lost 3 or 10 points on the early call. Private estimates placed the notices at 80,000 bales.

The morning was unsettled and about 8 to 13 points net lower. Covering checked the decline and there were slight rallies from the lowest around 2 o'clock.

On the run hours who had been waiting for a hard soak on which to put out fresh short lines helm to sell and by the middle of the morning offerings were more than the market could readily absorb and prices fell to new levels for the season. Cash markets were unfavorable and, like weather reports and the forecast of fair weather, were also encouraging to ruling orders. At noon the trading months were 2 to 5 points under the last prices of Saturday.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—Cotton futures opened steady 2 points and of to 4 points up. Cables were some better than due, but little attention was paid to foreign advices, as interest was centered on the May position in New York. The local trade turned buyers on report that about 100,000 notices had been issued there and were being promptly covered. This was taken as partial confirmation of the many rumors that have lately been afloat that cotton would not be given in May and shipped to foreign ports. May in this market after a slight decline on the first call, steadily rallied and was 10 points net on Saturday's close. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 7 to 9 points up, net.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 28.—The political situation in Europe at the moment is very critical and important developments are due today. Paris says the financial situation is quiet, orders are unfavorable owing to the respective heavy taxation for the purpose of providing military needs. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable, except over the northeastern corner, where night temperatures were cool. There was general light precipitation over the Atlantics, as need. The Gulf and western states, also over the central and western states. Indications are for fair and warmer weather, except over the northeastern quarter of the belt, where a rise in temperatures will be delayed for 36 hours. Liverpool is cable 70 points lower to 1 point higher than due on old crops. Spots 3 lower. A cable from Austria said: "Cotton is a perfect bear." Our market opened about 2 higher, and was carried up 5 points additional on a sudden advance of 20 points in May in New York which gave hope of professional bull support in that option. Early reports stated that about 75,000 May notices were out, most of which Gwathmey, Craig and Weld. Later news said that McFadden was stoping notices.

The general situation seems to us to be rather as so unfavorable that the following is duly suggested bull move is more than can be done. This accounts for the loss of the advance here as soon as May in New York ceased.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET UNDER PRESSURE ALL DAY

Union Pacific, Reading, Steel, Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Copper Heavy

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 28.—Selling was resumed at the opening today and was kept up during the day. The decline was pushed by many of the leading stocks. Large amounts of Reading, Steel and Amalgamated Copper were marketed. Losses of 1 to 2 points were sustained in the first trading by Union Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio, Smelting, Amalgamated Copper, Can, American Tobacco and Hunnely preferred. In a half hour of brisk selling new low records for the year were established by a score of stocks. Among these were Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio and Can preferred. Scarcely any resistance to the selling movement was encountered for a while, but near 11 o'clock the market rallied from a half point to a point on active covering.

Liquidation was on a broad scale during the forenoon session. The downward movement assumed formidable proportions in the early trading. Reports of heavy policies cropped out especially the Southern Railway shares, but the remainder of the list declined. Inherent strength. Floor operators did little, the early bear waves and were not encouraged to resist taking all the tim out of speculation.

Closed firm.

In the last half of the session trading was in small amounts and changes were slight, but the undertone was firm. Evening up of short contracts furnished about the only element of strength.

The Bank Shop.
BY JOHN M. OSKISON

In a Boston paper the other day I ran across some comment headed "The Money Trust," and signed by H. L. Higginson. Major Henry Lee Higginson is a big man in the banking world, a good friend of the Morgan firm, a conservative of the backward leafing sort. He has a first-rate notion of a bank and of the bank's functions:

"In many ways, a bank is like any other shop. Every successful shopkeeper tries to know his trade, and be able to deliver them when wanted. The grocer owns his sugar and flour; the shoe dealer owns his shoes; both of them can deliver their goods at once, but the banker does not own the money, which is simply on deposit. He borrows it on the strength of his name. His wares are simply character, ability, and knowledge of his business, in which his depositors must have full confidence."

Major Higginson does not see how it would be possible for a money trust to be set up when the very business of banking depends upon getting and keeping the confidence of the people. The tendency among bankers to work harmoniously, through participation in underwritings, Major Higginson believes to be set up when the very business of is due to a motive of self-defense. Much money is to be handled in big enterprises and the bankers who can furnish it must work together to protect those who own the money. As shopkeepers they approve of, and

"This question arises: Does the lender need the borrower more than the borrower needs the lender, and, if so, does not the City of New York has undertaken to build a great system of subways. Does the city need the money more, or do the bankers need the bonds more?"

He must be a shopkeeper, this modern banker, and, like every other man of shopkeeper, he must respect the right of competition and the laws of trade. He must not set up artificial barriers between lender and borrower. As soon as he does that he finds a committee of congress camping on his trail.

THE WEATHER

Forecast till 7 p. m. Tuesday.

Atlanta and Vicinity—Cloudy tonight; Tuesday fair, with slowly rising temperature.

Georgia—Cloudy tonight; Tuesday fair, with slowly rising temperature.

Alabama—Fair tonight and Tuesday; rising temperature Tuesday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

A storm of considerable force is central this morning off the New Jersey coast, with the atmospheric pressure below 29.6 inches. This was accompanied by rain over all of the area bordering the Atlantic from northern Florida to the New York.

Owing to the high atmospheric pressure central over the lake region and extending down the Mississippi valley, the weather became decidedly colder Sunday night throughout the cotton belt east of the Mississippi river. The lowest current temperatures this morning were 20 degrees, at Asheville, N. C., and 28 degrees, at Florence, Ala. Current temperatures were below 50 degrees at almost all points in the east except near the gulf and Atlantic coasts.

Owing to the presence of a new disturbance over Montana and the Dakotas, the weather is much warmer west of the Mississippi, especially in the northern part of the Rocky Mountain region.

Fair weather, with slowly rising temperature, is indicated for tonight and Tuesday at Atlanta and vicinity.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Hartfield, Poyner & Co. say: Wheat—The visible today should show a good decrease and this with the strength in Liverpool will undoubtedly give us ahigher market.

Corn—The visible figures are liked city cash corn higher. Country offers will be comparatively light, $15.75; lake, $15.87; casting, $15.50.

Oats—The country does not seem to be disposed to market when prices advance. Warmer weather would be desirable for the crop just now.

Provisions—On any good decline we prefer the buying side.

Receipts of wheat since July 1 have been 172,000,000 bushels more than last year. Exports from July 1 to April 1 increased only 45,000,000 bushels. Our visible supply is only 10,000,000 bushels more. This shows that domestic distribution this year has taken care of 80,000,000 bushels more of wheat up to date than the crop this time last year of the preceding crop. It is evident that our domestic consumption of wheat is increasing faster than population, and with the advancing prices of meat and other food products; there is a natural tendency to use wheat because it is the cheapest form of food. This increased demand is one of which will have to be reckoned with as a permanent factor in our supply and distribution.

WOULD UNITE NATION TO SHIELD GIRLS WHO ARE TRAVELING ALONE

National Travelers' Aid Association Launched to Care for Every Girl in America Who Must Travel Unattended

WAR ON GIGANTIC SCALE AGAINST "WHITE SLAVERS"

Other Conferences Held Monday — General Session at Night — Sociological Congress Ends Tuesday P. M.

Steps toward launching a National Travelers' Aid association, one of the purposes of which would be to meet every train in every important city and see that traveling girls are properly cared for, were taken at the conference of travelers 'aid workers held at the First Methodist church Monday morning as a part of the Southern Sociological congress.

Leaders of the work think that before the afternoon session is over the national association will have been definitely and perfanently formed, and that the thirty-six separate American organizations that have been working toward the protection of girls will have consolidated.

The travelers' aid conference was one of several Monday morning meetings of the Southern Sociological congress. Other conferences, held in various parts of the city, were on public health, the church and social service, race problems, child welfare, courts and prisons and organized charities.

The travelers' aid conference was attended by about fifty workers, representing each of the important travelers' aid organizations in America. It was the first conference of its kind that has ever been held and grew out of suggestions made in Atlanta a year ago by O. L. tSeel and Miss Daisy Eckert, until a few weeks ago secretary of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A.

The leaders in the work conceived the idea of uniting into a national body all of the various societies working for the protection of young girls traveling in the cities, and by concerted efforts give them proper protection from the traps of the so-called "white slave traffickers."

At Monday morning's meeting the national organization was begun. Best methods of protecting the young girls were discussed at length and it was decided that one of the purposes of the association should be to meet every train in every important city and give proper counsel and aid to the traveling girls.

It is likely also that a set of "don'ts for girls," warning them against accepting candy, candy, advice of or even smelling flowers offered by strangers, will be posted in all the railway stations and possibly the street cars.

The association purposes to take hold of the work of protecting girls on a gigantic scale with organizations in each of the cities working in unison.

Among those addressing the conference were O. L. Steel, chairman, of Pensacola, Fla., and Orin C. Baker, secretary, of New York.

CHILD WELFARE AND PUBLIC HEALTH.

At the child welfare conference, held at the First Methodist church, Dr. A. J. McKelway, secretary of the national child labor committee of Washington, D. C., spoke on the extent of child labor in the south.

"The south should retain its identity as a specific section of our country, just as much as we speak of New England, the west and the northland," he said. "While child labor extends throughout the nation it is conspicuous in the south. I have seen children in occupations of hurt to the child in every southern state, from Maryland to Arizona, from Missouri to Florida. And these children in their helplessness cry for deliverance, and the bitterness of their lives is dissolved by their ignorance of what are the inevitable results of the child labor system.

"Child employment means adult ignorance. Child labor means ill developed bodies, dwarfed and stunted minds, starved souls and blasted lives. From the canneries of Maryland, the glass factories of West Virginia, the tobacco factories of old Virginia and Kentucky, the hosiery mills of Tennessee, the cotton factories of the Carolinas and Georgia and Alabama, the cigar factories of Florida, the shrimp and oyster packing houses of the gulf coast, the coal mines of New Mexico, the sweatshops stored and demoralizing street trade of southern cities, Richmond, Charleston, Jacksonville, Atlanta, Birmingham, Jackson, New Orleans, Houston, Little Rock, Memphis, St. Louis, Louisville and even Washington. The blighting influence of child labor leaves its wreckage.

"There remains six states in the south with a low standard of protection for working children, lower than most of the states in Europe. They are North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, New Mexico, Florida and Georgia. An alive and awakened public sentiment would soon demand the commonwealth's protection against the iniquitous practice of child labor."

The conference on public health met with the section on child welfare, and the discussion of their problems as to sanitation and hygiene affecting each was entered into with great enthusiasm.

RACE PROBLEMS DISCUSSED.

About 60 people heard the discussions of race problems at the Ponce de Leon Tabernacle. The conference was opened with an address by Jackson Davis, of Richmond, Va., who pleaded the need of developing the rural school as a social center and making it applicable to social life.

"The White Man's Debt" to the Negro" was discussed by Mrs. J. D. Hammond, of Augusta, Ga. She emphasized the need of the spirit of helpfulness upon the part of the white man in dealing with th negro. The great advantage that the white man has in the business and commercial world should make him great service to the negro in his struggle upward.

The negro as a farmer was discussed by Dr. J. H. Deloach from the University of Georgia. Since the negro is essentially an agriculutalist we should seek to make him most efficient in that line, he said. The White man's scientific knowledge of farming should be given to the negro. Co-operation between the negro and the white man is necessary.

Dr. G. H. Harris, of Nashville, Tenn., spoke on the needs of sanitation among the negro.

The religious convictions of the negro were discussed by J. W. E. Bowen, negro, of the Gammon Theological seminary, of Atlanta.

CHURCHES JOIN HANDS.

Another remarkable conference of the Southern Sociology congress Monday morning was that on the church and social service, held at the Central Congregational church, where leaders of Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish churches all united in the same cause.

The conference opened with a symposium on the work of the various religious organizations and "The Roman Catholic Church and Social Service" was discussed by Dr. Leo L. DuBois, of Atlanta.

Dr. Charles S. McFarland, of New York, followed with a discussion on "The Protestant Church and Social Service," and Dr. I. Lewinthal, of Nashville, Tenn., told of the attitude of the Jewish church toward social service.

The Y. W. C. A. and social service work was taken up by S. W. McGill, of Nashville, Tenn., and the Y. W. C. A. standpoint was explained by Miss D. Caster, of Charlotte, N. C.

Dr. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist church of Atlanta, made a plea for co-operation between white and negro churches in efforts for social betterment.

PLEAS FOR ORGANIZED CHARITIES.

Francis H. McLean, of New York City, and W. M. McGrath, of Birmingham, Ala., were the principal speakers at the conference on organized charities held in the Wesley Memorial church. Joseph C. Logan, secretary of the Associated Charities of Atlanta, presided.

Mr. McLean outlined a program for organized charity in the southern cities and said that no other social movement has displayed such growth in five years as the organized charity work in the south.

Mr. McGrath pleaded for the enlistment of the organized agencies of the south in developing efficiency.

"It is extremely necessary," he said, "to have scientific workers for scientific work, and as organized charities is a science of handling the individual and the family, also the institutional life of the community, it is absolutely necessary to have qualified workers who shall co-ordinate all the agencies and enlist their co-operation in the great work of rehabilitating the family. Efficiency means effective work, and without it, it is impossible to look for constructive results."

WOULD PAY CONVICTS.

At the conference on courts and prisons, held in the First Baptist Sunday school room, Louis Bernhardt, of Chattanooga, declared that convicts should receive the proceeds of their labor while in prison so that on leaving they would have capital enough on which to start life.

"By this method you can make the ex-convict a stable member of society instead of a debit," he said.

Dr. F. Emory Lyon, of Chicago, followed with a stirring appeal for the abolition of capital punishment.

"There is absolutely no justification in taking a man's life for an offense committed," he declared. "This is simply a spirit of vicious retaliation and should be abandoned for more sane and wholesome treatment for the condemned man.

"The individual is not always to blame. Society has its responsibility, and it should be our duty to return men as new members of society rather than dispatching them to eternity."

Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, of Washington, D. C., followed with a plea for a nation-wide campaign against segregated vice. Dr. Crafts said in part:

"In the United States, the white slave traffic revelations led to the enactment of the white slave law, whose value has been largely in the fact that the federal law is usually better enforced than state laws and local ordinances.

"All across the land for three years cities and states have been putting out the 'red lights.' The new light that is putting out the 'red light' is the proof medical, moral and civic that neither for the individual nor the city is vice a necessary evil. One hundred and fifty cities have made efforts of late by municipal authority to suppress the social evil. Some of them by immediate obliteration of the previously tolerated and segregated vice markets, others by the gradual removal of its auxiliaries, liquor selling, etc., with the distinctly avowed purpose of abolishing the business ultimately.

"Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Baltimore are varying examples of the "tapering off" municipal plan. But the most important recent action, right or wrong, in the social evil in the United States is in the realm of 'state law.' Three states, alas, have adopted the Japanese-German-French plan of state regulation of vice, the licensing of prostitution—Louisiana, Texas, Nevada, suggesting the great importance of a full discussion of this matter in this Southern Sociological congress. This licensing of vice is likely to be attempted elsewhereamaybe by good men who sincerely believe faith this is the best way to reduce this evil.

"There are two special arguments for suppression rather than segregation. First, taht the segregated district tolerated and protected by the police is the chief inducement for the white slave traffic. Second, the segregation and toleration of this crime, forbidden by state laws, is the mainspring of the 'graft' that has dishonored American police in so many cities and destroyed their efficiency."

The second general session of the Southern Sociological congress at the auditorium Sunday afternoon was addressed by Dr. Walter Rauschenbusch, of Rochester, N. Y., who told of the need of the present day along moral and religious lines; Dr. T. M. Moore, of Toronto, Canada, who spoke of the friendly relations between the United States and Canada and Dr. Owen Lovejoy, who made an urgent appeal against child labor.

Gov. Elect John M. Slaton presided and Dr. Percy J. Starnes played several selections on the city organ. Richard P. Hobson, who was to have addressed the meeting, was unable to be present.

The evening session of the congress was addressed by Miss Julia Lathrop, Washington, director of the Federal Children's Bureau, and Bishop P. W. Thirkfield of New Orleans.

The special conferences of the congress will be in session again Monday and Tuesday afternoon. Three more general sessions of the congress will be held at the Wesley Memorial church in five years, Monday evening; 9:30 Tuesday morning and the closing session at 7:30 Tuesday evening.

The program for Monday night's meeting follows:

GRAND OPERA SURE FOR '14; FELICITATIONS REVEAL THAT

Response From Chairman Otto Kahn to Colonel Peel's Telegram of Congratulation Speaks of Next Year—Thanks All Who Helped, in Behalf of Atlanta Association

"We are looking with the most pleasurable anticipations to the privilege of coming to Atlanta next year."

Such are the words which appear in a telegram received by Colonel W. L. Peel from Otto H. Kahn, chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan company, and they show beyond any doubt that not only is Atlanta to have grand opera again next year, but that Mr. Kahn and other New York directors intend to be present.

Colonel Peel telegraphed to Mr. Kahn late Saturday night, advising him of the splendid success of the week. Mr. Kahn's reply was soon forthcoming and the warmth of his words impressed all his entire satisfaction at the success of the week. The following is his complete reply to Colonel Peel:

"New York, April 26, 1913.

"Mr. W. L. Peel, President,

"Atlanta Music Festival Association, "Atlanta, Ga.

"Delighted with your telegram. Many thanks in the name of all directors and on behalf of Metropolitan Opera company to yourself and your associates and your splendid and inspiring public. I knew that all the artists would give their very best to Atlanta, and am delighted at your public's wonderful response, demonstrating once more its understanding and love for operatic art. Our only regretful thought is that we were unable to spend this week among our friends in Atlanta; but we are looking forward with the most pleasurable anticipations to the privilege of doing so next year. Kindest regards and best remembrances to you.

"OTTO H. KAHN."

Speaking of Mr. Kahn's telegram, Colonel Peel said:

"It is indeed gratifying to have Mr. Kahn speak of our opera week in such language, and it shows in most conclusive fashion that we will have grand opera again next year. I know this will be pleasing news to all of our friends both in and outside of Atlanta. And to all of them from every part of the south, I desire to take this opportunity to express the thanks and appreciation of the Atlanta Music Festival association for their liberal patronage.

"And I want to add one more word," said Colonel Peel. "Everybody connected in any way with the achievements of the week has done his duty. There has been no friction anywhere. Our directors have put their shoulders to the wheel whenever called upon, as have all the guarantors. In the actual work, our people have responded nobly with their clubs and in their hospitable homes to make the days agreeable for the singers and other visitors. Friends have come in large numbers from every section of the south to help us, and to all of them I return sincere thanks for their inspiring presence and valued support.

"And to our local newspapers, those makers of public opinion, I cannot say too much. They have opened to us their columns, and filled them with instructive articles regarding the operas and interesting sketches regarding the artists. Their writers and reporters have not only caught the fire of the divine music, but they have thrilled the minds and hearts of others. To them our association and the musical public owe a debt of gratitude, which it is pleasing to admit but difficult to repay.

"Again I return thanks to them, to our friends at home and our friends from a distance, to all of our associates in the work, to the artists themselves, and to each one who shared in making the success so notable and so brilliant."

CRITTENTON HOMES ARE AN INDICTMENT OF US

Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, Their Head, Says Conditions Should Not Permit Them

Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett made an address at First Christian church Sunday night upon "The Civic Conscience" that was a fearless and clear-cut indictment of public indifference to crime in its primary phases.

She said in substance:

"Our people seem content to jog along comfortably in happy oblivion to the crime that festers about us. We cannot close our doors at night and sleep with our own children safe about us and be considered guiltless, when a young girl may be murdered and dragged to death, as happened in Atlanta in the early hours of Sunday morning.

"It is our duty to make our streets as safe for our boys and girls as our homes. We cannot have the peace of the city safe and clean and be satisfied with that. It must be clean and safe for the boys and girls, also.

"I sat on a platform with a distinguished speaker who presented a very interesting paper on 'The Kid on the Corner.' He dealt with the subject learnedly and made it very interesting, but it lacked in an essential point. I was to follow him on an entirely different subject, but I changed my address to meet the crisis I faced. I made my speech on 'The Corner the Kid Stands On,' and said that the boy, or the kid, as the gentleman called him, would be all right, if the corner he stands on be clean. Young people, boys and girls alike, if they are not protected for in safe surroundings, and there are no safe surroundings, entirely safe, so long as there are any pitfalls allowed, so long as any one of our streets are disreputable and unsafe.

NEED CLEAN DIVERSIONS.

"Children and all of immature or budding age need clean and wholesome diversions. Picture shows that could be so potent for good are in many cities the reverse. These should be cleaned up and properly chaperoned and ventilated and make safe for the attendance of the young and old alike. Films that depict successful crime screens that show a desperado in all the details of his deeds coming out boldly and unchallenged. Such films are worse than should be barred. Recently I saw one giving a man on a black horse, booted and spurred and with cowboy sombrero, committing a robbery and when in a close place by pursuit shooting down some of his would-be captors and escaping on his big black horse. It was all vividly shown and made his bravado look like bravery and as a final flourish the fellow showed him dashing away on his big black horse and waving defiance to all—this brought a wild cheer from the boys in the house and doubtless for an hour thereafter that will make some of them try to do the very same thing some day. Clean up the picture shows, make them interesting and educative, allow none other, destroy their influence for bad. Do not, for the sake of dragging dollars from a crowd, let them show the very attractive indecencies and pernicious examples that must some day be corrected at great cost of life and labor and money.

"Our sins of commission may be many and these may sear our souls and leave many a scar—but our sins of omission are damnable. We must be alive to our chances to stop crime and sin. We must use the ounce of prevention. We must be on the alert to check things in their incipiency, break up the places where vice begins and provide for the natural, wholesome and clean opportunities for good. Our work must be construction. Our plans must be laid intelligently, and our every speech written in all bitterness of despair and contrition we will spend more money and effort than all the police force will have cost.

"INDICT OUR CIVILIZATION."

"We have a chain of Florence Crittenton missions; it is blessed, and more to be built as opportunity comes.

"All these and all other institutions of similar purpose ought not to be, should not be, allowed to exist, because we should make our land and our cities so safe that they should not be needed.

"They all stand as an accusation against us, they all indict our civilization as a failure.

"Yet they are needed and they do exist and every man is thankful they are such and keep open the door of mercy, and escape, and reform because they are absolutely necessary under present conditions. If our civic conscience were aroused intelligently, and our good purposes held to with practical and unrelenting persistence, we could have an ideal community. Even jails and penitentiaries and poorhouses could be abolished, because they would be needed no longer, if we lived in an atmosphere morally pure, where vice had been scotched and crushed before it could strike the souls of our boys and girls.

"We speak of the reform of women and girls. Do you not know that we should speak in equal terms of regretful horror of the reform of men and boys. No man sins alone, no woman alone. The degraded woman will drag down all she can by her vice, and a degraded man is a menace as well.

AN APPALLING TRAFFIC.

"The white slave traffic has reached the appalling proportion of over 550,000 women in the United States in the haunts of sin. More than 20,000 fresh victims are added every year, the children of our own people. And more than 5000 die nlive on the proceeds of this vice.

"The United States government has taken up the subject and its strong hand will repress all that is possible, but the place to stop it all is right in the homes of the people and right on the street corner in our cities and towns. Public schools can do a large part in teaching children what is to be shunned. Public amusements must be kept clean enough not to contribute to crime. Moving picture films must do their part in repression of sin and sinful tendencies. Civic conscience must be aroused to a keen appreciation of all that is good and to a live alertness to stop all that is bad."

Mrs. Barrett told several interesting incidents in her own experiences in reform work, to sustain the startling statments she made. Her recital of the story of Mary McCann the Irish girl heroine of the Slocum disaster, which brought a medal from congress in recognition of her service, was one to grip the heart.

Mrs. Barrett left the city at midnight to reach New York by Tuesday, in order to take passage to Germany on important work for the Florence Crittenton home.

WATER, ICE AND VAPOR ILLUSTRATE TRINITY

Dr. Ogden Uses Unique Simile in Sermon on the Revelation of God

God in three persons, the doctrine of the trinity, was illustrated by Dr. Dunbar Ogden in his sermon at the Central Presbyterian church Sunday morning by the trinity of water—ice, liquid and vapor.

"The doctrine of the trinity, which is one of the greatest pillars in the structure of religion, is made clear to us by the analogy of the trinity of water. There we have the same substance in three separate forms—ice, liquid and vapor—each form appearing totally unlike the others and yet perfectly one. Work in the world and yet they are interchangeable and identical in their inner construction.

"The theory of an all-powerful God is absolutely essential to the progress and happiness of the world. Atheism is an impossible theory. It gives a mechanical grind to life that deadens ambition and makes all effort listless and useless while the whole universe is transformed by the spiritual interpretation of existence."

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO FILL AUDITORIUM NEXT SUNDAY

First Christian and Second Baptist, Outgrowing Own Quarters in Contest With Each Other, Must Use City's Biggest Hall for Joint Meeting—Occasion Will Be Memorable

A rousing mass meeting like unto none that Atlanta ever has seen before is scheduled for the auditorium-armory next Sunday morning.

The high walls that were echoing a few hours ago the wonderful harmonies of grand opera, will reverberate ther to "Onward Christian Soldiers" and other stirring tunes lifted by thousands of voices in one great chorus.

It will be the occasion of the first joint meeting of the Second Baptist Bible school and the First Christian Sunday school, which have been engaged for weeks past in one of the most remarkable contests in the Sunday school records of the whole land.

Perhaps the auditorium will be full. No one knows. There may be as many as 5,000 in the two schools. There are certain to be a couple of thousands more of invited guests. The capacity of the big place may be taxed as severely as it was by any of the audiences of grand opera. But the size of the audience is a matter of interesting speculation only. The occasion itself is what is gripping the attention of the country. That two rival Sunday schools of distinct denominations should gather in one meeting of the nature of this one, is the thing that counts.

John S. Spalding, superintendent of the Second Baptist Bible school; C. Y. LeCraw, superintendent of the First Christian Sunday school; Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor of the latter church, and Dr. John E. White, pastor of the former, will be the principal speakers at the meeting.

Announcement of the big occasion was made in both Sunday schools on April 27 and was received with a flurry of enthusiasm.

Weeks ago it became apparent that the two schools would have to abandon their original plan of meeting, vanquished with victor, in the quarters of one or the other. That plan contemplated that the Sunday school which is defeated in the contest should become the guest of the other at its quarters. There to longer "throw out the line." But each school has grown so large that it hardly can contain itself, much less hundreds of visitors, in its own quarters.

Leaders representing both sides of the contest conferred together in a quandary. "Hold the meeting in the auditorium," suggested one of them. That was the solution. But the auditorium already had been engaged for May 11. That is to be the last Sunday in the three months' course of the contest. There was nothing else to do but to engage the auditorium for May 4; which was done—and now all is ready for the big day to dawn.

The two schools will convene in their respective classrooms at 9:30 o'clock next Sunday morning. They will meet on the capitol grounds, where a big panorama photograph will be made of them, with the state house in the background. Thence they will march to the auditorium by way of the Washington street viaduct, singing as they march. Decatur street and its environs will be awakened to a new era in Sunday school work when the fine old songs of that march fill the atmosphere above it. The schools will enter the auditorium singing, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

So big is the affair that the "movie" men have arranged to record it in the films, and views will be taken of the march from the capitol to the auditorium.

On Sunday the First Christian Sunday school had what was stated to be the largest attendance on record anywhere in the south—1,946 scholars, or just 1 less than it had the previous Sunday. D. W. Sims, general secretary of the organized interdenominational Sunday school work in Georgia, addressed the First Christian Sunday school, declared that it had achieved the new southern record. Forrest Adair, the real estate man, also addressed the First Christian school.

But with a lesser attendance of 1,640 the Second Baptist Bible school scored more points than its rival, Sunday, adding 7,115 to its score, as against only 6,457 added by the First Christian. The margin by which the greater number of new scholars at 5 points each, reported by the Second Baptist. The standing of the two contestants now is as follows:

Second Baptist, 38,193 points.

First Christian, 44,357 points.

Next Sunday's score may decide the contest, but the result will not be definite until May 11, the thirteenth Sunday, and the last in the counting. A picnic depends upon the decision.

J. F. Rutherford spoke at the Grand theater Sunday afternoon on the subject, "Where Are the Dead?"

"Men are neither in heaven, purgatory, nor torment," he said, "but they are actually in their graves, waiting for the second coming of Christ, when they shall be awakened and given a trial for life."

LITTLE GIRL RUN OVER BY A FAST MOTORCYCLE

Willie Belle Kelley, Aged 4 Years, Badly Hurt Near Inman Yards

Willie Belle Kelley, a four-year-old girl, was knocked down and run over by a motorcycle Sunday morning near Inman yards, on her way to Sunday school with her older brothers and sisters.

She sustained a broken hip, a broken collarbone and several bruises, and is now at the Tabernacle infirmary. Though her condition is precarious, she probably will recover.

Lacsey McCord, a fourteen-year-old boy, was riding the motorcycle. He has not been arrested, but county officers are investigating the case. It is said McCord was speeding down grade when he struck the child.

Mrs. J. J. Clements, of 125 Connally street, is the mother of the little girl. The child was visiting her grandmother, Mrs. A. L. Baker, when the accident happened.

DR. BRADLEY WELCOMED BY FRIENDS AT TRINITY

Dr. H. Stiles Bradley, former pastor of Trinity Methodist church, and a delegate to the Southern Sociological congress, preached in his old church Sunday, and at the close of the services was greeted by his former congregation.

These friends of Dr. Bradley pressed forward just after the benediction was offered, and a long line was formed.

Some of the former members who since have joined other churches, attended Trinity on Sunday to hear and meet their old pastor once more.

STREET CAR MEN WEAR 'SAFETY FIRST' MEDALS

Trolley Company Presents Over 1,000 Watch Fobs to Employes

Motormen and conductors of the Georgia Railway and Power company have been presented each with a handsome bronze medallion in the form of a watch fob, bearing the inscription "Safety first, safety always." This gift to the employes in charge of the street cars was made by the company as a token of membership in the Atlanta Public Safety league, and is intended to serve as a reminder that safety of the public should be the first and last consideration of the street car men.

Over 1,000 of these fobs have been distributed. The men are pleased with the tokens and are wearing them attached to watches guaranteed to be perfect timekeepers. It is not generally known yet it is a fact that the street car company has an official watch expert to whom the employes report regularly with their timepieces in order that accuracy may be assured. Now that the watches have been adorned with fobs of a uniform design, the street car men may be said to be properly fixed in regard to the watch question.

The fobs were made by the well known firm of Whitehead & Hoag, of New Jersey, from a special design furnished by the local street car company.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Suffered Three years. Used Resinol. Now Not A Pimple To Be Seen.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 27, 1912. "I had been troubled for the past three years with pimples which completely covered my face and neck. The pimples would come out, fester up and cause me to pick at them, feeling very uncomfortable. I tried most all kinds of facial creams, but with no effect. I tried a sample of Resinol Soap and Ointment and noticed instant relief. I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and began the treatment. After using two jars of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, there was not a pimple to be seen, and now my face is as smooth as if there was never a pimple on it." The Library Movement in Georgia.

The annual meeting of the Georgia Library Association, now being held in Atlanta, is an event that should appeal to citizens generally as well as to the men and women who are professionally engaged in this interesting field of endeavor. For, the public library of today is a distinctive and potent influence in social and civic progress. Its educational reach and stimulus are almost immeasurable. It is not simply a treasury of literature, but a vital force in the community's life.

The truly modern library is particularly constructive and creative in its effect. The work of the Carnegie Library in Atlanta furnishes a striking instance in point. It shines as a continuous light upon the city's practical needs as well as a continuous and cheering warmth for booklovers. As an aid and guide to the public schools and to colleges its value is beyond reckoning. Not a limited circle of born readers, but the people as a whole feel the library's influence.

It is this spirit of ever-widening service that chiefly distinguishes the modern public library; it is this that led to the Georgia Library Association and that inspires the counsels of this admirable group of men and women who are now convened in Atlanta.

Their meeting will enrich and hearten the library work of the entire State. Their exchange of ideas and experience will generate new enthusiasm and will point the way to greater progress. It is gratifying to note that the public library movement is making itself felt in a larger and larger number of Georgia towns and cities and even in the rural districts. It is to be hoped that the time is not distant when every town in the State will have a library of its own.

Hygiene in Rural Schools.

Dr. Ernest B. Hoag, of Minnesota, an interested student of education, recently made a tour of the country school houses in his home district. He found, according to the Louisville Courier-Journal, that the simplest principles of hygiene were frequently neglected. We are told, for instance, that in one school room an old fashioned stove had been fired until the mercury registered ninety degrees, while out of doors, it was ten below zero. The pertinent question is asked, "What chances are there for such children to maintain their health?"

This incident suggests the importance of more careful measures of sanitation for rural schools in general and of keen vigilance in this respect on the part of teachers. The Minnesota case is, perhaps, exceptionally bad; at least we believe this may be said so far as Georgia is concerned; for, under the common school administration of this State there is a persistent effort to apply and to instill into the children themselves the rules of practical hygiene.

A few seasons ago the Department of Educatio published an admirable booklet on school architecture, in which detailed plans for school buildings that would be at once comfortable, healthful and beautiful were set forth. This is but one among many efforts to impress upon school boards and teachers the vital need of conserving the children's physical welfare.

There can be no doubt, however, that in every part of the country more attention should be given to this phase of rural school interests. Such simple matters as ventilation and clean premises count vitally in the mental and moral as well as the physical efficiency of pupils. The fact is there should be a system of medical inspection for all country as well as city schools.

American Sentiment On The Canal Toll Question.

It has long been evident that the preponderance of thoughtful opinion in the United States is in favor of arbitrating the Panama canal tolls controversy or, better still, of repealing that clause of the canal act which grants toll exemption to American coastwise shipping. If, however, anything were needed further to emphasize this fact, the recent meeting of the American Society of International Law would abundantly suffice. This society, as is well known, includes many of the country's foremost jurists and others who represent the broadest and truest spirit of our national life. Among its members are Chief Justice White, Oscar S. Strauss, Horace Porter, Secretary of State Bryan, former President Taft and scores of this rank. It is a significant fact that the dominant thought in the speeches and discussions of the society sustained the plea for arbitration or for a repeal of the act which has provoked the pending difference between our Government and Great Britain.

The Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which the United States negotiated with England, specifically provides that the canal shall be open on terms of entire commercial equality to all nations, observing the conditions therein set forth. This treaty was adopted in order that our government might have a freer hand in the construction and control of the canal than was possible under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty which the later agreement superseded. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty, adopted more than half a century ago, when it was contemplated that an isthmian canal would be built by private enterprise under international supervision, provided that neither the United States nor England should "ever obtain or maintain for itself any exclusive control over the ship canal; that neither country should ever erect or maintain any fortification commanding the vicinity of the canal; that neither nation should ever colonize Central America; that neither country should take advantage of any intimacy, alliance, connection or influence with any country in Central America in order to secure any rights or advantages in regard to commerce and navigation, not possessed by the citizens or subjects of the other."

Such terms were clearly too rigid to warrant the United States government in building a canal on its individual responsibility and at its own expense. They presented divers obstacles and restrictions which it was the purpose of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to set aside. England renounced certain important privileges it had formerly been assured, and also granted new and larger privileges to the United States. One of the essential conditions on which our Government secured this wider freedom was that which guaranteed entire commercial equality to all nations in the use of the canal.

The United States is amply warranted in levying tolls, if it will, but it cannot discriminate in favor of any shipping, and remain true to its contract. It cannot honorably or legally exempt American coastwise shipping and at the same time exact tolls of English vessels.

The truth is the exemption of American coastwise shipping is in effect a government subsidy to one of the most highly protected of all monopolies. This class of shipping has no more need or right to toll exemption than the steel trust or beef trust to a high protective tariff. That clause of the canal act is of no benefit whatever to the rank and file of the American people; it is *simply another case of gov*ernment patronage to a special interest, simply another instance of that unfair and unreasonable policy of "protection" which the Democratic administration is commissioned to reform.

It is earnestly to be hoped that Congress will use its earliest opportunity to repeal this indefensible clause of the canal act and thereby save the nation's honor from a worldwide stain.

Georgia's Corn Clubs

The rapid and substantial growth of the Boys' Corn club movement in Georgia is shown in a report recently issued by the State College of Agriculture. Flourishing clubs are now organized in one hundred and forty counties, and their aggregate membership is practically ten thousand boys.

The significance of this enterprise to the State's farming interests and to commercial and industrial affairs cannot be overgauged. The Boys' Corn clubs have not only increased average acre yield of corn and improved the quality of the grain, but they have also aroused new enthusiasm in every field of scientific agriculture. Through their efforts, Georgia is coming to be a greater food-producing State and, therefore, more prosperous and independent.

It is also gratifying to note the Girls' clubs are thriving. Their membership is approximately twenty-five hundred; and if the College is given adequate means for extending this work, the Girls' clubs will soon rival those of the boys.

Business Administration

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

One of the most honored pieces of humbug is the cry of "a business administration."

A mayor is elected claiming to represent the "business element," and announces that his program will be "strictly business" economy and without sentiment and fool reforms.

A governor gives forth that he will make the business interests paramount in his plans.

Political parties adopt business platforms, with *issues of tariff reform or free silver or reduced gov*ernmental expenditures.

Even the college president, the pastor of the church, and the superintendent of city schools are anxious to be known as "good business men."

Business is all right in its place, which is an important one. But also it is a secondary one.

What we need everywhere, more than we need a business administration, is a HUMAN ADMINISTRATION.

"Business means economy, and economy means literally "housekeeping." Now, good housekeeping deserves attention and praise; but it is not the main thing. It is very necessary that father make a living and good investments and have a paying position; also that mother see to it that eggs and butter are bought cheap, that waste is guarded against, and that food is good and plenty; but what shall we think of the parents who are so wrapped up in these affairs that they allow their children to be abused, poisoned, stunted, and morally perverted, possibly kidnaped or murdered?

The state is but a large family. It is the first concern of a state to see that its citizens have justice, protection in their rights, and relief from their wrongs; and that its children are properly trained for citizenship. All this comes before saving and making money. Better a hundred times over that the state go bankrupt than that "one of the least of these" be cheated of justice.

Young girls are duped, assaulted, entrapped, and ruined by an organized band of rakehelly cadets in our big cities, while the police guard our "property."

Children of tender age are drafted into factories and their lives stunted, while legislators are busy arranging "business" regulations with a lively lobby.

The people are not only ill-served, but brow-breaten and abused by our common carriers who declare fat dividends on their transportation of human live stock, while highly paid legislative railway commissions are considering everything else but protecting life and making travel as easy and cheap as possible.

The able business folk who occupy the seats of authority amongst this people should be reminded that the first purpose of a railroad or street car line or subway is to carry human beings in safety and in comfort; that the first people to turn to, when the commonwealth needs money, are the common people, and not the bankers; that the first thing to regulate about a theater, "movie," or other public hall is that in case of fire or panic the audience shall be able to walk out without trampling one another to death; that the most vital thing about automobiles as far as the government is concerned is to see that they do not run down pedestrians; that the first building law is safety; and that always and everywhere the life and health of men and women is to be the state's chief concern.

America, supposedly the world leader in democracy, is more careless of human life, and more contemptuous of human interests, when they conflict with property interests, than any nation in Europe.

Above all, can you conceive of any charge against our lawmakers so terrible as that they allow rotten and diseased meat, poisoned canned goods and unnutritious bread to be publicly sold to families, while children in the streets are tempted to buy candies made of carpenter's glue and coal tar sweetening?

I hope to live long enough to see mayors, governors, and presidents elected upon a platform pledging safety and health protection to the people, and to the children of the people support and proper training during adolescence.

Without despising the business efficiency let the state recognize that its only real wealth is in the health and intelligence and industry of its people.

Captain Barnacle's Travelogues

BY JOHN H. WISHAR

"I have never been able to eat olive oil since the time I had command of the old iron bark Gough," declared Captain Barnacle, shoving his plate of salad away, and eyeing the dressing meditatively. "Although it was olives and olive oil that saved us all, I had so much of both it took me months to get the grease out of my system.

"On this voyage we were bound from Palermo, Italy, for New York, and were loaded with 98,000 cases of green olives. This was a very valuable cargo and I was ordered to make a fast trip if possible. The Gough was one of the old-time iron barks, a stanch and speedy little craft. So when we left the Mediterranean I was in hopes of a record passage. But luck was against us. First we ran into a hurricane which dismantled the vess and then we ran into a calm belt, just north of the equator.

"For three weeks we lay there in that broiling sun, trying to rig up some kind of a jury mast. One morning the carpenter rushes up to me and says there's six feet of water in the hold. My heart sank and I gave up for lost, for six feet of water in the hold for an iron ship with no lifeboats left meant sure death. But I went below to investigate and what do you think I found? Why, the ship was half full of pure olive oil!

"Well, sir, I was some surprised. I found that the intense heat of the tropical sun on the sides of the iron ship had made a regular oven out of the hold and that the olives in the cases had been fried out, the oil running down into the hold. It was a puzzler what to do. All our food had been spoiled, so all we had to eat was these dried olives, mixed with some of the oil, and it wasn't bad, either. Then I took about five hundred cases of the oil with a barrel of cement which we had on board I built three masts. I would fix a layer of olive pits and then a layer of cement, and so on until the Gough had masts and spars as fine as when she sailed from Palermo. I had plenty of canvas on board, so we were soon under sail again.

"Then I had the olive oil drained off into barrels and canvas bags, and when we reached New York I sold this oil myself and turned over t the company the cases of dried olives. And, sir, do you know they tried to get the $1,000 which I got for this oil, but I maintained that this belonged to me, as I delivered the cased olives, unopened, with the exception of those used for the masts and spars. Well, do you know, they took it to court and I believe the case is still dragging on, for Attorney Tim Healy told me he was going to appeal. But I got my money and the Gough still has her olive seed masts."

JUST SMILES

"May it please your honor," said a lawyer, addressing one of the judges, "I brought the prisoner from jail on a habeas corpus."

"Well," said a man, in an undertone, who was standing in the rear of the court, "these lawyers will say anything. I saw the man get out of a taxi at the court door."

"I had always thought the public servants of my own city were the freest on earth," says a New York man, "but a recent experience in Kansas led to a revision of that notion.

"One afternoon I dashed into a railway station in that town with just half a minute to buy my ticket and enter a train for Chicago. I dashed through the first gate and, pointing to a certain train, asked hurriedly of the gateman:

"'Is that my train?'

"'Well, I don't know,' replied he, with exasperating deliberation. 'Maybe it is, but the cars have the company's name on them.'"—Harper's Magazine.

Wait for the Wagon.
A LA CABARET.

Come with me, my honey;
Old Mike, with all his money,
Can't turkey-trot or bunny-hug.
Be my lovin' kissin' bug—
Oh, babe!
Slow, babe!
Kiss me as we go, babe!
While we do that lovin' Wagon Glide.

CHORUS.

Wait for the wagon, kid;
Then we'll start a-raggin', kid.
Honey babe, you're there.
Come on, kid, get to it;
Ev'ry time we do it
My heart starts jumpin',
And bumpin' and thumpin'.
Wait for the wagon, hon—
My 40-H. P. wagon, hon.
Doin' that dreamy,
Lovin' peaches creamy,
Tantalizin' Wagon Glide.

April 23.—Comes to my office T. Daly the Philadelphia poet with a tayle of how it is Charley Beck's birthday, so to luncheon with a crowd of six and first they made as if I might have to pay the reckoning, but C. Beck would not have it so, like the prodigal he is. Thence to the tennis-courts where I did play against C Beebe and did beat him, albeit not without pains. To an inn to dinner, my wife being gone to Pen's Woods to rest, which I pray she will, and thence to Mistress Margery's and find there J. Street and Mistress Ada and he told me of a ball he had gone to, of the folk that are in the moving-picture profession, as is now the craze, and many droll tayles he had, too. So home and to-bed.

24.—Came Will McKay the pamphleteer to visit me and I find him kindly and pleasant as he was the day he first gave me employment 10 years since. With my cozen to luncheon and he did have some waffles and I a strawberry pasty and in his roystering, calf-like way he did pour the maple sirup upon my pasty, deeming it would be distasteful, but it was toothsome and I did enjoy it to the full. To the ballpark, where the Giants did prevail again and I fear they have a fine team. Home with D. Runyon and to dinner at Mistress Kate's, cooked by Addie Moore and very fine, too. Thence home and labouring until late and to-bed.

THE MESSED DAMOZEL.

At the Cubist Exhibition.
The Messed Damozel leaned out
From the gold cube of Heav'n;
There were three cubes within her hands,
And the cubes in her hair were seven;
I looked and looked, and looked, and looked—
I could not see her, even.

Her robe, a cube from clasp to hem,
Was moderately clear;
Methought I saw two cubic eyes,
When I had looked a year;
But when I turned to tell the world,
Those eyes did disappear!

It was the rampart of some house
That she was standing on;
What much at least, was plain to me
As her I gazed upon,
But even as I gazed, alas!
The rampart, too, was gone!

(I saw her smile!) Oh, no, I didn't.
Though long mine eyes did stare;
The cubes closed down and shut her out;
I wept in deep despair;
But this I know, and know full well—
She simply wasn't there!

THE MODERN WOMAN

XXXIV.—WOMEN IN THE CENSUS.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Where one decennial census will show a preponderance of women in the population of the United States, the next may show an excess of men. The relative number of women in a community has been found to have a noticeable effect upon the industries and conditions of the locality. For instance, for a number of decades the New England states were reported as having a greater number of women than men. So great was this discrepancy that the term "New England old maids" became proverbial, and it was a generally accepted theory that there were not enough men in New England to supply husbands for the marriageable women. Now there are only six states in the country having an excess of females, including the District of Columbia. Only two of these, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, are New England states. The others are southern—Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina.

• • •

The change in the sex of the population is credited largely if not entirely to immigration. In the New England towns the factories which used to be operated largely by native born women now include among their operatives a large percentage of foreign born male laborers who have a greater strength and endurance and can meet the demands of the more strenuous modern industrial competition. The American born females who, a generation ago, found employment in factories have advanced to commercial or professional employment in keeping with the added demands in these callings. While the number of women in industry has increased throughout the country between the censuses of 1900 and 1910 it did not increase in the locality in which women were formerly so greatly in preponderance.

• • •

The New England states now have a population of 99.3 males for each 100 females, but in 1900 they had only 97, so in ten years a decided advance of masculine population has been made. In Maine there are 103 males to each 100 females against 102.1 in the census of 1900. In Vermont there are 105 and a fraction and in Connecticut 102 and a fraction, over a respective registration in 1900 of an even quantity in Connecticut and 103.9 in Vermont. In the District of Columbia there has been a slight increase in the number of male inhabitants, no doubt due to the increased number of men being taken in preference to women in many of the government offices. There are now 98.9 men to each 100 women in the District. Ten years ago there were only 98.4. This is a small difference, but it is marked enough to call forth fear and trembling from hundreds of women clerks who are fearful that the new administration may decide to substitute men in their position.

• • •

Taking the last census as a standard, there are ten large American cities which have more women than men in their population. These are New York, Atlanta, Albany, Rochester, Baltimore, Boston, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Newark and Philadelphia. It will be noted that these cities are located in the eastern states. The population of New York City is 2,342,492 males and 2,284,401 females, a difference of less than 2,000, but it is worthy of note as pertaining to the largest American city. The feminine population of the old Quaker city is almost 30,000 in excess of the masculine. The difference in both these cities can be attributed to the increased number of foreign born women who locate there immediately after landing in this country. The clothing trades employ thousands of immigrant women and girls in these two cities. The foreign population of Chicago is also great, but because it is an inland town it does not include as many women as men.

• • •

The number of births in the country gives a slight majority of males, and until the age period between fifteen and nineteen this advantage continues. During these years the proportion of population is equal for both sexes representing each 4.9 per cent of the entire population of the country. From that period on until the age of sixty-five the male population is slightly in excess of the female, but between sixty-five and sixty-nine it again becomes equal and continues so for the balance of the time included in the census man's average life. The distribution of sex is most nearly equal in the native white and negro portions of the population. The greatest dominance of males is with the foreign white.

• • •

The negro women seem stronger than the men. They start off with an advantage in numbers at birth. They hold this advantage in early childhood, but between the age of ten and fourteen the distribution of sex among negroes stands even. The difference begins age in with the fifty-year age period and continues its advantage until the age of forty when the women evidently begin to pay for their excess of hard work because they decrease in numbers faster than the men, and for the next thirty years the men have the advantage in point of numbers, although the number who reach seventy years of age is equal.

• • •

While he total number of children attending the schools represent nearly 100,000 more boys than girls, the number of girls who attend school after they are fourteen is 64,916 greater than the number of boys who remain in school. In other words, there are over 60,000 more girls than boys who go to high school. The number who go on to college is not so great, although it is most creditable for while it is comparatively within the past generation that colleges have been available for girls, there are now 134,019 women over twenty-one years of age in college or special schools, while the number of young men thus engaged is only 179,237. Under these conditions it is quite possible that within another decade the college bred women will considerably outnumber their brothers.

• • •

Attention should also be given to the fact that the educated negro women already outnumber the educated negro men. In fact, the negro girls have the advantage from the time they enter school, as there are almost 100,000 more girls than boys in school, even at the ages between six and nine. This difference continues proportionately throughout the college age. The number of negroes who were attending educational institutions after the age of twenty-one, as recorded by the last census, and made public only last month, was 22,391. Of these 11,787 were women and 10,604 men.

• • •

The census man who, in one case out of ten is a woman, finds many amusing incidents in his rounds and not a few of them occur in securing the information from women who are loath to take the government into their confidence regarding their private affairs. Women are charged with habitually concealing their age, and it takes no small amount of ingenuity upon the part of the enumerator at times to elicit the information required by his blanks. Women frequently will deduct from ten to twenty years from their ages, and then in giving the ages of the other members of their family betray themselves. A Kansas enumerator tells the story of a comely matron who gave her age as forty-five. In the midst of the conversation a buxom young woman came in carrying a child about a year old. It developed that the young woman was a granddaughter and the child the third great-grandchild of the stately old dame whose looks hardly indicated the twenty years which had passed since her forty-fifth birthday.

4,000 PERSONS RESCUED FROM MISSISSIPPI FLOOD

Tensas and Concordia Parishes of Louisiana Flooded by Break in Levee at Gibson

(By Associated Press.)

VIDALIA, La., April 28.—Vidalia today is filled with refugees from sections of Tensas and Concordia parishes north of here which are being rapidly flooded by the waters from the crevasse in the Mississippi river near Gibson's landing, which occurred early Sunday morning.

More than 4,000 persons were taken from the overflowed section yesterday to Natchez and other places across the river in Mississippi. Several thousand head of cattle also were transferred to points across the river and last night and today there was a continuous stream of cattle passing through the streets of Vidalia to the ferry, where they are being taken to Natchez.

There are eight river steamers and a number of launches engaged in the rescue work between Vidalia and Gibson's landing, under the direction of the United States army relief corps. Levees north of Vidalia are lined with people, many of whom have brought what few household goods and wearing apparel they could hurriedly assemble.

Horses and cattle also are being driven from the levees awaiting steamers to take them across the river.

Reports received this morning say that the crevasse is almost a half mile wide and 20 feet deep. The waters continue to fall away rapidly. For a distance of about fifteen miles just back of the break and south, the water ranges from a depth of two to three feet on the outer edge to twenty feet in the immediate vicinity of the crevasse. The water had spread over the entire Red Water Proof, Goldman, Gibson and Azalea plantations this morning and was rapidly approaching Clayton, which is expected to be covered within the next two or three days. The St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railways which skirts the west bank of the river from Ferriday north to St. Joseph is covered with water a distance of several miles and the tracks just west of the crevasse have been washed away. About twenty miles of the tracks of this line will be under water within the next few days. Another of this company's roads, which extends north from Ferriday via Naylor, Lake, will be put out of commission to the middle of the week.

Crevasse at Gibson's Causes River to Fall

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—After reaching a stage of 52.5 feet at Natchez, once thought 53 feet above the previous high record, the Mississippi river began to fall rapidly there yesterday as a result of the crevasse in the Louisiana levee near Gibson's landing, and the gauge at Natchez this morning registered 7.5.14 feet, a drop of more than a foot within 26 hours.

For the forty-eight hours ending at 7 a. m. today there was a rise of two-tenths at Vicksburg, due to the return of water from the crevasse above Myerville Miss. A rise during that period of half a foot at Baton Rouge and four-tenths at Donaldsonville, La., was recorded, but at all other points, including New Orleans, a fall was recorded.

As a result of the crevasse near Gibson's landing, which is turning the bulk of the Mississippi flood waters out of Tensas, Concordia and Catahoula parishes, the river will fall, or remain nearly stationary, after a few days, at all points south of Natchez. Within a week this crevasse water will begin to return to the Mississippi river through the Red river, north of Baton Rouge, and another rise will start from the mouth of the Red south to the gulf. A considerable quantity of this crevasse water will find its way to the gulf through the Atchafalaya river, the weather bureau, in a special bulletin issued today, advised that yesterday's forecast maximum stages of 41 feet at Baton Rouge, 25 feet at Donaldsonville and 15 feet at New Orleans will not be attained if remaining levees hold. The crest is expected to reach New Orleans about May 12.

The stages from Vicksburg this morning, compared with the 1912 record, were:

Vicksburg, today's stage, 52.3 feet; 48-hour change, .2 rise; 1912 record, 51.5.

Natchez, today's stage, 51.4; 48-hour change, 1.0 fall; 1912 record, 51.4.

Baton Rouge, today's stage, 41.1; 48-hour change, .2 rise; 1912 record, 45.8.

Donaldsonville, today's stage, 32.6; 48-hour change, .4 rise; 1912 record, 34.8.

New Orleans, today's stage, 20.1; 48-hour change, .1 fall; 1912 record, 22.0.

TALLAHASSEE'S TARGET PRACTICE TO BE PROBED

Navy Department Wants to Know Why Monitor Fired so Close to the Dolphin

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Investigation thorough and complete is to be made of the "near accident" in which figured the dispatch boat Dolphin, with Secretary Daniels party aboard during the naval target practice last week in Chesapeake Bay.

The navy department announced today it would look into the matter carefully to discover why a shot from the monitor Tallahassee came near to blowing the small boat out of the water.

The congressmen most of whom are members of the house naval affairs committee were inclined today to make light of the matter, so far as is known the Tallahassee's gunners mistook the mark on the stack of the tug Hercules for the canvas target. The Dolphin was on the canvas target. The Dolphin was an shot is said to have gone through her rigging. The haze that had settled over the bay is declared to have been accountable for the error.

Secretary Daniels today ordered the investigation in an effort to discover where the blame lies. Rear admiral N. C. Twining, chief of the bureau of ordnance, who was in charge of the tests, has been called upon for a report.

ENLISTMENTS DROP OFF UNDER LONG TERM LAW

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The average American will not enlist in the army and mortgage his future for a long term.

This is evidenced by the practical failure of the new recruiting law passed by the last congress. Four months' operation of the law has resulted in an average enlistment and re-enlistment of 2,100 men, which is a material loss as compared with the number of days the law providing for enlistment for three years. Secretary Garrison is expected to use this fact to re-enforce the recommendation for a further amendment to the law to provide for a two-year term of enlistment and for the creation of an independent reserve.

PEEPLES WILL NOT BE PALMETTO CANDIDATE

South Carolina Attorney General Will Finish Many Suits Now Pending

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 28.—Attorney General Thomas H. Peeples will not run for governor in 1914, but instead will stand for re-election to his present office. This announcement was authorized by Mr. Peeples today. He gave as one reason for withdrawing from the race for governor the number of suits which are now pending and which he feels it his duty to push to completion; therefore, he will not enter the gubernatorial fists next summer, but will run for another term as attorney general.

Mr. Peeples authorized the announcement of his candidacy for governor during the session of the legislature, being the first half dozen to do so.

The intimation that General Peeples from the race for governor to succeed Governor Blease, may strengthen the chance of Representative George R. Rembert to obtain the Blease votes. Mr. Rembert, who has served Richland county in the lower house for several terms and is counted as one friend of the Blease forces, is an avowed candidate to succeed Governor Blease.

He has announced that Attorney General Peeples announced his withdrawal from the race and, while Mr. Rembert has not commented, it is certain that he views with favor the retirement of the attorney general as strengthening his chance for success. He himself said that he thought too early to be making positive announcements for governor in 1914, but nevertheless it is known that he contemplates making the race.

The other announced candidates for governor in the next campaign are Lieutenant Governor Jonathan Smith, of Timmonsville; Speaker of the House M. L. Smith, of Camden; Railroad Commissioner John G. Richards, of Liberty Hill; former Senator R. I. Manning, of Columbia; Solicitor R. A. Cooper, of Laurens; Prof. John S. Carlisle, of Wofford college. All of these are strong men and it will make the race next summer an interesting one.

An unofficial but unofficial announcement is the candidacy of Assistant Attorney General Fred H. Dominick for congressman from the Third district next year. Mr. Dominick was campaign manager for Governor Blease last summer and is a former assistant attorney general. He will run against Mr. Wyatt Aiken, the present congressman from the Third district, and a warm fight is in prospect for the office.

ARMY HORSEMANSHIP CONTEST BEGINS MONDAY

WASHINGTON, April 28.—"Rough riding" officers of the army will be given opportunity to display their horsemanship in the annual contest which begins today at Fort Myer and will continue through Wednesday. Forty officers arrived this morning from West Point and Fort Ethan Allen, bringing with them mounts with which they expect to capture the honors of the meet. They are Captains Hazard, Holcombe and Blake and Lieutenants Wipfler, Duel and Lewis. The elimination contests will be run off today.

Because of the large number of entries a course has been laid outside the riding hall at the army post. The chief event will be steeplechasing and flat racing. These alone will be conducted in the open. The other events will be held in the riding hall.

Although it is purely a military affair, a number of horse lovers in civil life will enter their mounts in the contests. Prominent among the civilians are Dr. T. S. Bailey, surgeon; Dr. T. R. Thomas, chaplain; B. J. Fry, quartermaster; E. C. Goodwyn, treasurer; C. J. Owens, color sergeant; T. M. Thompson, historian.

James E. Brown presided at the organization meeting, which will be known as Camp Coweta, Sons of Veterans.

CHEATS HANGMAN'S NOOSE IN WILD DASH IN AUTO AFTER WIFE HELPS TO OPEN CELL

Woman Brings Condemned Husband Hacksaw During Religious Services—Prisoner Bars Window, Scales Wall and Steals Automobile

(By Associated Press.)

TAMPA, Fla., April 28.—Speeding through the country in a stolen automobile, E. F. Andrews, condemned to be hanged for the murder of J. W. Alexander at Palmetto, eight months ago, is making a dash for liberty, in the custody of the sheriff of Manatee, who is under charge of furnishing the hacksaw with which Andrews last night sawed his way out of the cell in murderers' row, and then through the barred outer window into the jail yard, after which he scaled the wall and got away without arousing the guard.

Mrs. Andrews was admitted to the jail yesterday to see him while religious services were being held and it is charged she slipped the hacksaw to him then. The tool was found at the jail this morning where Andrews had dropped it.

Andrews killed Alexander during a drunken brawl at Alexander's home near Palmetto, in Manatee county. He was tried and convicted in that county and brought here for safe keeping, the jail there being insecure and threatened being much popular feeling against Andrews.

The man came from near Greenville, Ala., and it is thought he is headed in that direction in the automobile. Sheriff Spencer sent out news of the escape and offered a reward for Andrews' capture.

CHARLES CRISP MAKES A SPEECH ON TARIFF

New Congressman From Third District Delivers Maiden Speech in House

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28.—Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of the Third district, delivered his maiden speech in the house this morning. Leader Underwood gave him fifteen minutes and he improved the opportunity to make a ripping speech in favor of downward revision of the tariff.

Judge Crisp dealt more particularly with the income tax provision of the tariff bill, and recalled that as far back as 1896 he had advocated a constitutional amendment to authorize the levying of an income tax by congress.

The Georgian was given the closest attention today, and his remarks were generously applauded. He seemed as much at home in debate on the floor as he was a parliamentarian at the speaker's desk in the last congress.

Instead of allowing any large contributions, an opportunity will be given every man, woman and child living in Habersham county, or who have lived here or have visited here, to make $1 contributions for the cause.

Habersham county was one of the banner counties, to send soldiers to the war—having sent out more volunteers than it had people. Members have already volunteered subscriptions.

WOMEN GAMBLE FOR HIGH STAKES

Many women are gamblers for very high stakes. They stake their health and looks upon everything working out all right when attacked by those ailments which their sex alone are called upon to suffer.

The only excuse can be ignorance of the dangerous consequences or an aversion to undergo medical examination. This may often be avoided by recourse to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a perfectly safe and harmless remedy compounded from roots and herbs, which for nearly forty years has been curing American women from the worst forms of female ills. WASHINGTON, April 28.—In the belief that a cure of tuberculosis has been discovered, Asaph Judin announced by Dr. Friedmann, it was announced today that the Jesuits had decided to establish a research laboratory in Loyola university, Chicago, in which tests looking to the establishment of the claims of the inventor of the cure would be made.

The Jesuits will investigate these claims and also will test other serums said supposed cures in the new laboratory. Dr. Maximilian Herzog, formerly a pathologist in the United States public health service, will be in charge of the tests.

It is presumed that this query arose from the incident of Secretary of State Bryan's "wineless" dinner, and the press wanted to institute a new reply to the historic saying of the governor of South Carolina to the governor of North Carolina, "It's a long time between drinks."

DAUGHTER ASKS FUNDS TO PROSECUTE DAD'S SLAYER

(By Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 28.—An appeal to the people of central Kentucky for funds to support the prosecution of the men charged with the murder of Ed Callahan, former sheriff of Breathitt county, will be made by Mrs. Lillian Gross, daughter of Callahan, according to a statement made by Mrs. Gross here last night. She claims that the prosecution is crippled by the inability to supply the necessary funds for maintaining in Winchester, the scene of the trial, the large number of witnesses whose homes are in the mountains more than 100 miles away.

It was due largely to the efforts of Mrs. Gross that indictments were returned against the fifteen men charged with the killing of Callahan. For weeks after the killing she rode horseback and unescorted over the mountains gathering evidence against the alleged slayers. Ed Callahan, who was killed, while standing in front of his store at Jackson last spring, was one of the most picturesque figures in Kentucky mountain feud history.

RHEUMATISM COMES FROM CONDITIONS WHICH CAN BE REMEDIED

But Local Applications on the Skin Cannot Get at the Cause of Your Suffering.

Just a bilious attack and a slight deposit of uric acid. Now calomel and similar mercurial preparations do not dissolve and expel the uric acid sediment that forms from undigested, fermenting foods, and when this poisonous acid is not expelled it accumulates quickly, thickens the blood and settles in joints and muscles. The joints and muscles then become stiff.

An attempt to cure this rheumatism must be directed toward removing uric acid from blood and tissues, breaking up the crystalline urates already formed and preventing new deposits.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It dissolves uric acid out of the tissues, holds it in solution and expels it in the urine. It thoroughly cleanses the system of fermentation and purifies the blood. It will give prompt relief in all cases of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning.

Get a bottle of JACOBS' LIVER SALT from any druggist and begin with rheumatism, try JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately. It will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else. Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. Insist on the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. Size. If your druggist cannot supply you full-size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Diaz Has Artillery and Huerta the Infantry, According to Reports

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Rapidly growing situation in Mexico City, fraught with friction between the Huerta and the Diaz factions of the provisional government is reported in confidential advices and these reports are augmented by agents of the Carranza constitutionalists arriving here.

Between the two officials practically all government forces in the federal district have been divided into two armed camps. Huerta nasadded to the infantry at the national palace and Diaz has encamped much of the artillery on his estate, Hacienda de Tlalpan, about thirty miles away. LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

BY TWORTON W. BURGESS.

Little Foxes, little Chucks,
Little Squirrels, Mice and Mink,
Just like little boys and girls,
Go to school and learn to think.

You didn't know that, did you? Well, it's a fact! Yes, sir, it's a fact. All the babies born in the Green Forest or on the Green Meadows or around the Smiling Pool have to go to school just as soon as they are big enough to leave their own doorsteps. They go to the greatest school in the world and it is called the School of Experience. Old Mother Nature has charge of it, but the teachers usually are father and mother, for the first few weeks, anyway. After that Old Mother Nature herself gives them a few lessons, and a very stern teacher she is. They just have to learn her lessons. If they don't, something dreadful is almost sure to happen.

Of course, Sammy Jay knew all this, because he had had to go to school when he was a little fellow. So Sammy was not much surprised when from his snug hiding place in one of the old apple trees he discovered that there was a school in Farmer Brown's old orchard. Johnny Chuck was the teacher and his three baby Chucks were the pupils. Sammy Jay was so interested in that funny little school in the old orchard that he quite forgot to think about mischief.

The very first lesson that the three little Chucks had to learn was obedience. Johnny Chuck was very particular about that. You see, he knew that unless they learned this first of all, none of the other lessons would do them much good. They must first learn to mind instantly without asking questions. Dear me, dear me, Johnny Chuck certainly did have his hands full teaching those three little Chucks to mind! You see, they were such lively little chaps, and there was so much that was new and wonderful to see that it was dreadfully hard work to sit perfectly still just because Johnny Chuck told them to. But if they didn't mind instantly they were sure to have their ears soundly boxed, and sometimes were sent back to the house without a taste of the sweet, tender, young clover, of which they were so fond.

After a few lessons of this kind they found out that it was always best to obey instantly, and then Johnny began to teach them other things, things every Chuck should know. First there were signals. When Johnny whistled a certain way it meant: "A stranger in sight; possible danger!" Then each little Chuck would sit up very straight and not move the teeniest weeniest bit, so that from a little distance they looked for all the world like tiny stumps. But all the time their sharp little eyes would be looking this way and that way to see what the danger might be. After a while Johnny would give another little whistle, which meant "Danger past." Then they would once more begin to fill their little stomachs with sweet, tender, young clover.

Sometimes, however, Johnny would whistle sharply. That meant "Run." Then they would scamper as fast as they could along the nearest little path to the house under the old apple tree in the far corner and never once look around. They would dive head first, one after the other, in at the doorway and not show their noses outside again until Johnny or Polly Chuck told them they could.

Then there was a still different whistle. It meant "Danger very near; lie low!" When they heard that they flattened themselves right down in the grass just wherever they happened to be and held their breath and didn't move until Johnny signaled that they might. Of course, there never was any real danger. Johnny was just teaching them so that when danger did come, as it surely would, sooner or later, they would know just what to do.

It surely was a funny little school and sometimes Sammy Jay had hard work to keep from laughing right out.

WEDDINGS

Twitty-White

The wedding of Miss Fay Carithers Twitty and Mr. James Saffold White, of LaGrange, was a social event of much interest in Gainesville, Ga. It took place Wednesday evening at the Presbyterian church, Dr. T. T. Twitty, of Norcross, uncle of the bride, performing the ceremony.

Miss Katherine Robinson, of Easly, S. C., was maid of honor, and Mrs. G. Carlton Hosch, of Atlanta, was matron of honor. Mrs. W. P. Burks, of LaGrange, was one of the matrons, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mary Shelby, Miss Nofee Rozier, Miss Helen Telford, Miss Ruth Carithers, of Winder; Miss Delia Thompson, of Jacksonville, and Miss Elizabeth Dyer, of Texas.

The ring bearer was little John Hosch, who bore a cushion of white satin painted with lilies. The little flower girl was Celeste Dunson, of LaGrange, a niece of the groom.

The matron of honor was gowned in white crepe meteor, and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. The maid of honor's gown was of rose-colored crepe meteor, and she carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. The maid of honor's gown was of rose-colored crepe meteor, trimmed with point lace, and her flowers were pink sweet peas.

Little Miss Dunson wore a lacey frock of white and carried a graceful basket from which she showered before the bride.

The bridesmaids wore gowns of sheer white over pink satin, handsome embroideries beautifying the gowns. They carried old-fashioned bouquets in lace holders.

Mr. Lebanon Pinkard, Mr. Louis Render, Mr. Lovic Spinks, Mr. Obed Hill, and Mr. Freeman Awtry were groomsmen, and five friends from LaGrange acted as ushers.

Before the entrance of the bridal party, Dr. Frank Ridley of LaGrange sang, "Oh, Sweet and Holy," and the wedding marches from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn heralded the entrance and departure of the wedding group.

The bride wore a handsome gown of soft white crepe meteor. It was draped with rose point lace and embroidered chiffon. Tiny rosebuds held the folds in place and pearl embroideries weighted the chiffon. The long court train gave grace to the gown, and the misty tulle veil lent a touch of delicate beauty. A coronal of orange blossoms held the veil to the head.

She entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. F. Clarence Twitty.

A reception at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. Mrs. W. C. Lyle, of Augusta, and Mrs. John Hosch assisted in receiving.

Miss Kathleen Black and Miss May Grogan, of Elberton, and Miss Minnie Lee Jordan, of Vienna, and Miss Ethel Haycraft, of Ocilla, served punch. The Mu Phi Epsilon sorority, of which the bride is a member, assisted in serving.

Both the church and the home were elaborately decorated, sweet peas, palms and ferns being used, together with lilies and roses.

The centerpiece of the table was a handsome basket of white sweet peas set in a broad plateau of the same lovely blossoms.

After an extended wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. White will make their home in LaGrange.

Learning "Home Efficiency"

"Home efficiency is as important as business efficiency," says Louis Brandeis.

Home efficiency is not difficult to practice, and if applied to your buying, will save you money, worry, time, and effort.

Common sense is the first step toward efficiency in shopping. Consider how to use your time and money to best advantage. Know where to shop. This in turn requires thought on the things you need, the money you can afford to spend, and the values to be had. Effort may be saved by shopping at the proper hour, shopping by 'phone, or by anticipating your wants and placing standing orders.

The merchants advertising in THE JOURNAL will gladly co-operate with you along these lines. Read their advertisements in THE JOURNAL tonight and every night.

IN LOCAL THEATERS

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

FORSYTH—Vaudeville.
LYRIC—Billy the Kid.
ATLANTA—"A Butterfly on the Wheel."
BIJOU—Vaudeville and pictures.

This is to be an important week in things theatrical. It will record the re-establishment of the Forsyth as the Keith vaudeville theater of the south. Hundreds of theatergoers who have never been satisfied to see vaudeville anywhere else will delight in the privilege of again assembling in the cosy playhouse to see their favorite form of entertainment.

The best show builders in the Keith offices were busy putting this show together, and they will continue busy getting shows for the rest of the summer. The quality acts of the Keith and Orpheum circuits will play here before the opening of next season. And as to next season that is quite another story.

The Forsyth is going to resume its former policy without a single change. There will be the daily bargain matinee performances commencing every afternoon at 2:30. Twenty-five cents buys the best seat. At night there will be the usual performance starting at the usual hour and the scale of prices will be the same as before. The box office will be open daily from 9 a. m. The telephone is working and will be promptly answered. Reservations can be made in advance for any performance.

The bill that will start vaudeville again at the Forsyth is full of quality. The headliner will be Sophye Barnard, Lou Anger and company, in "The Song of the Heart," a genuine musical comedy. Chris Richards, the English comedian and dancer. Gaby, the famous pose artist; Bud and Nellie Heim, clever children; pretty Misses Murell and Frances, "Just Two Girls;" Burr and Hope, in a sketch, and Honors and La Prince, in acrobatic stunts, make up the bill.

The Forsyth is back to its first love. And theatergoers are glad of it.

The ever-popular western melodrama, "Billy, the Kid," which will be the attraction at the Lyric all this week, has been several times during the past seasons in New York and is said to have proven eminently satisfactory to the audiences that have attended it. The plot of the story revolves about Billy, whose mother has been murdered. Billy takes an oath to avenge her death and in the ensuing complications becomes an outlaw. Comedy is introduced to lighten up the more strenuous portions of the plot, and a pretty love story runs through the four acts. The scenic settings are unique in naturalness. Berkeley Haswell will be seen in the title role.

This week the Bijou will present a spring offering of one of the best balanced vaudeville bills that has been seen at this popular little playhouse this season. There is no particular feature on the program, but all have been selected after careful thought to provide a program of diversion, novelty, and entertaining musical features. One act in particular that is sure to please is that of Summers and Emoise, who are styled the magnetic mirth makers. Others on the program are Button and Caprice, a clever singing and dancing team. Stephannia Brothers play a variety of intricate and difficult instruments, and include in their repertoire the latest musical selections, both popular and classic. Dick Hamlin, the character comedian, has been engaged, and will no doubt be one of the big favorites. Motion pictures will open and close each performance and on Monday and Saturday two matinees will be given, at 2:30 and 4. During the balance of the week matinees will be given at 3 o'clock. Night shows at 7:30 and 9.

MRS. BARRETT TALKS ON VALUE OF HUMAN LIFE

Florence Crittenton Worker Makes Interesting Address at St. Mark Church

The value of human life, and especially the duty of society toward fallen women, was the subject of an interesting address Sunday morning at St. Mark Methodist church by Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, of the Florence Crittenton homes, who is attending the Sociological congress.

She said:

"Human life is the most valuable possession of the state. The first and highest duty of the law is to protect life. The protection of property is an afterthought. Property derives its value from humanity.

"One may break the largest plate glass window on Whitehall street and rob a store of its best goods, or otherwise break the laws of property, and such violation will be punishable by fine or imprisonment.

"But let one raise a hand to strike life from the smallest, even the waif of the streets, and the law demands the life of the murderer, no matter how high and great he may be.

"The Saviour placed a high estimate upon fallen humanity, for it was to restore God-likeness that He left a throne of glory. One of His greatest sermons to Pharisical man was when He allowed a womn of the street to minister to Him. Simon stood aloof from the Savlur because he argued that if the Savlour be a prophet, He would know the character of the woman who had bathed His feet with her tears and dried them with her hair.

"So the Saviour rebuked Simon, telling him how the woman had done these things not from the requirements of a hst, but from pure love and gratitude. And when she had done these things she broke upon Him the box of precious ointment to anoit Hi mwith her best treasure as an ultimate expression of her dearest love to Him.

"The Pharisee stood condemned, and perhaps we may stand condemned if we despise and further degrade the women who have fallen, instead of striving to lift them up to a pure and upright life. Mary Magdalen comes like a clarion call down the ages to all women and to all men, to rise and live again, and even as the alabaster box filled the whole house with its perfume, so her name and life have perfumed the ages and the memorial is told of her wherever the gospel is preached."

ARMY ORDERS

"A STRANGE NEW FORCE IS STIRRING IN WORLD"

Dr. Robins, Pastor of Trinity, Says Spirit of Helpfulness Is in Churches

"The world is moving toward a wonderful change in religion and economics," said Dr. J. B. Robins, of Trinity church Sunday evening." A new and strange influence is making itself felt i nthe world around us, and suddenly some day that Presence which walked with the disciples in the person of Jesus Christ, will manifest itself again in a great movement for the good of humanity. The first stirrings of the world-wide change in sociological, economic and religious conditins already have made themselves felt, and somewhere there is one who will lead the world to higher things, one who will stand before the people, the re-incarnation of the spirit which filled the Saviour with a passion to save the world."

Dr. Robins pointed to the Sociological congress, now in session in the city, as an illustration of the growing desire of men and women to better conditions of life; and declared that this spirit of helpfulness toward humanity is creeping more and more into the churches.

"And" said the minister, "it is the influence of the spirit of the Christ in the modern world, and the fulfillment of his promise to remain always with his disciples and their followers."

The church more and more realizes the importance of the schools, good education, health, and related things; and, as it looks out for the salvation of souls, it is making greater efforts to improve conditions of living."

DR. CRAFTS WOULD HAVE LAW AGAINST "DISTRICTS"

Dr. Wulbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform bureau, is in favor of a state measure to do away with all "red light" districts. A similar measure now is pending in congress.

Dr. Crafts made this suggestion in an address at the Harris Street Presbyterian church Sunday night. He also scored the liquor traffic and the prevalence of gambling. He advocated effective measures against these practices.

Darken Your Gray Hair

This Recipe Makes an Excellent Home Made Preparation.

It is humiliating to go into a drug store and ask for a hair dye or stain or resterer, as it at once calls attention to a fact that you want to conceal—that your hair is turning gray. This simple recipe relieves you of all such humiliation and at the same time gives you a cheap and better hair darkener and scalp tonic than the store preparations. Procure from your druggist at little cost one ounce of bay rum, a quarter ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound; then in your own home dissolve the Barbo Compound in 7 ounces of water and add the other two ingredients and you will have a most effective hair darkener as well as a good remedy for dandruff and other scalp humors. It not only browns the gray hair but acts as a tonic to the scalp, makes the hair soft and glossy, and is not sticky like many store preparations. It is to be applied once a week until the hair is darkened, then every two weeks. Be sure your druggist gives you Barbo Compound—no other ingredient will take its place.

Price to Work For Crackers Against Vols

Nashville Now Has an Edge on Series and Manager Smith Is Anxious to Go Out and Even It Up With Win

Again the Nashville Vols oppose the Crackers at Ponce park today.

To date the Vols have been the only team to show against the Crackers, the only club to play a series with Billy's bunch and get away with the odd. The count between the teams now stands three to two in favor of the Vols, five games having been played between the two clubs.

Today the Crackers have a chance to even the count. In an effort to do so Manager Smith will likely send Gil Price to the mound. Opposed to him will probably be Case, who was driven from the hill early in Saturday's battle. Joe Dunn will catch for Atlanta.

Atlantians to Big Golf Meet

Atlanta is to be represented at the national open golf tournament at Liverpool, England, in June. George Adair, Stewart Maiden, Frank and Perry Adair have decided to make the trip abroad. Maiden will enter the U. S. tournament and is working hard to get in shape to make a good showing.

The national open tournament is the biggest golf event of the year and crack players the world over will be entered. In his position as golf instructor at the East Lake club Stewart Maiden is known as a class player and he stands a good chance to make some of the best go rather good to keep him from getting in on some f the honors.

George, Frank and Perry Adair are making the trip purely to try their luck on the foreign golf courses. George Adair has long been regarded as one of the best amateur players in the south, while his son, Perry, though only a youngster, has taken to the game like a duck to water, and in time will be right with the best of amateurs in this section Frank Adair too is keen on the game and wants a chance to try out some of the courses on "the other side."

The quartet will leave Atlanta June 9, and sail for England on June 11, arriving in time for the big event on June 19.

1,080 Mares Nominated

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 28.—The synopsis of the Kentucky futurity for foals of this year which closed with the Kentucky Trotting Horsebreeders' association here, April 1, shows that 1,080 mare were nominated, the pick of the brood mares throughout the entire country.

The list this year is headed by L. V. Harkness' Walnut Hall farm, near here, which has entered 89 mares. The Patchen Wilkes farm of Lexington is second with 82 nominations. Empire City farm, Cuba, New York names 28, the next highest number. The entire 1,080 entries are distributed among 204 nominators.

Of the thirty-one states and Canada, Kentucky leads with 378 nominations, while New York is second with 190. Canada sends 18.

The Maine-New Brunswick league expects to open its season on May 24, a holiday in Canada, and close September 6.

JORDAN WAS TURNED DOWN BECAUSE OF HIGH SALARY

Since the release of Otto Jordan and the signing of Carl Flick by the Chattanooga club there has been quite a bit of discussion as to whether Kid Eberfeld made the correct move. At the time it was made it was claimed that Jordan was slowing up considerably while Flick was coming like a house afire.

Candidly it looks as if the change was made mainly to save money for the Andrews-Elberfeld combination. It is known that Otto Jordan is a high-priced man, while Flick is young and gets far less than the former Cracker manager. There is probably a difference of $75 per month in the pay of the two men and from the class of work put up here by Flick and what is known to be Jordan's standard, it looks as a sure bet that the change was spurred by financial reasons, all of which is nobody's business but the Chattanooga officials.

In the three games the Chattanooga club played here last week Flick showed but poor class. He is fast, but uncertain and a decidedly lucky hitter. While he ranged out a few safeties most were of the fluke order, none having any special drive to them. At the fielding end of the game Flick has to date appeared wretched, not being sure or quick and covering many feet less around than Jordan, though the vet may cover some ten square feet less than he did when in his palmy days.

Since Flick came to the Southern league he has been at bat 41 times and made 4 runs and 11 hits for an average of .268, against 55 at bat, 5 runs and 12 hits for Jordan for an average of .219. At elding, Jordan has a record call, making fewer errors in all his games than Flick can loose in one battle. Jordan has made 30 putouts and 36 assists with just two errors and Flick has made 12 putouts and 28 assists with 6 errors. This gives Jordan an average of .974 and Flick .921. And it can be seen from the assists that Jordan is covering far more ground while Flick has luckily gotten a lot of pop-up plays which went for putouts.

College Teams Reach Finals

Good Game Most Every Day During the Coming Week. Race Narrows

The baseball championship of the Southern Intercollegiate athletic association will be narrowed down to two or more competitors this week, if not actually settled. Before next Sunday rolls around the title will lie between not more than four clubs.

Well-night every day the coming week is an important one in college ball. With the coming of the Commodores to Athens Tuesday and Wednesday, two of the main contenders for the championship will clash, Vandy having cleaned up in the northern states of the S. I. A. A., and Georgia having made a good showing against every team except Clemson, the first series of the year.

Sewanee will have hard games. The Tiger team passed through Atlanta Sunday on its way to Macon and Gainesville, Fla., playing Mercer Monday and Tuesday and the University of Florida a double-header on Wednesday. The Tigers come back this way the last part of the week, meeting Georgia Tech here next Friday and Saturday.

The Wake Forrest game on Monday was the only other one for the Jackets this week.

Following the games against Vandy on Tuesday and Wednesday, the university of Georgia will have another hard series, that with Tennessee on Friday and Saturday. Both of these series will be staged at Athens.

Tim Flood, manager of the Winnipeg team of the Northern league, gathered his players at Ottumwa, Ia., instead of at Excelsor Springs, Mo., as first announced as his intention.

Doyle Is Best At Swat Game

New York Field Captain Is at Head of National League Hitters

30,000 FANS GO TO GAME

Counting in the attendance of Memorial day at Ponce de Leon park, the Atlanta club has played before 45,488 paid admissions in its entire list of fifteen games this year, and has been seen at home by 29,411 fans who paid admission, just 587 figures short of the 30,000 mark.

The attendance Memorial day was 6,257, over 2,000 paid admissions less than was that on opening day when Atlanta won the trophy. Both days, the holiday and the opener, were not the best in the world for baseball. Opening day especially was drizzly and cold, while Saturday was extremely chilly. What Atlanta could do in attendance on a fine weathered holiday would be something like 10,000.

Kilbane and Dundee Ready for Bout

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 28.—Johnny Kilbane, of Cleveland, holder of the featherweight boxing championship, and Johnny Dundee, the clever New York featherweight, completed training Sunday for their twenty-round bout at Vernon arena Tuesday night.

Each boxed seven rounds before large crowds at their respective training quarters. Betting on the contest has been extremely light for a championship encounter, with the titleholder a top-heavy favorite. Some of Kilbane's backers have placed some bets at 2 to 1.

PITCHERS ARE GOOD

BY JULIAN MURPHEY

With the hole at shortstop filled in by the addition of Williams, a recruit sent this way by Manager Clark Griffith, of the Washington team, the only concern about the Cracker club is the pitching staff. It is a well-known fact that the outfield and infield is good, while the catchers are far above those that have caught for many Southern league pennant winners.

Ever since the first game of the year the fans have been asking for a new shortstop, an., now that they have landed a new man they are turning their attention to the pitching corps. There are some who believe it will round to good form, while others think it should have one or two additions, and all because the hurlers have not worked shut-out games against the few teams the Crackers have met.

PITCHERS ARE GOOD.

Personally, it looks as if the hurling corps of Musser, Weaver, Price, Brady and Bausewein is good enough for a first division class A club. It might not be as good as a staff composed of Walter Johnson, Ed Walsh, Russell Ford, Christy Mathewson and Rube Marquard, yet it is good for this league, and, with a bit more warm weather, this will be shown.

The pitchers to date have worked under the greatest possible disadvantage—the weather. It takes plenty of good, hot weather for a pitcher to properly boil out his arm, and until this real summer sun hits them a few times they are not going to look like they are there with the goods. However, they all have something on the ball, and, with a bit more warm under a hot sky, they are bound to do better.

Buck Weaver has pitched in this circuit long enough to demonstrate to the hardest of fans that he is a good man. Buck worked a rainy day game in Chattanooga and has not yet got*ten his arm in shape for a good game*. Paul Musser is going to prove a star. He has had poor control in the games he has pitched, but work will rid him of his defect, and then watch out. Old King Brady we all know. He does not look like he has anything, but he has. True, most of it is above his collar, but this is the kind that counts. Price is going at a grand clip right now, and should improve. He has a wicked curve ball and speed to burn, while, above all, he is willing to work all the time. Bausewein has not yet had any real work, but, my! the goods he has on that fast one of his! His last workout demonstrated his real form.

SHORTSTOPS ERRATIC.

The work of Keating and Dobard, the two shortstops who began the season, has been a puzzle. At times Keating has looked to be a wonder, and righ. now his worst fault is his size. He is decidedly small for strenuous infield work, where he is constantly being jostled by heavier men, but with it all is a good man to have around.

The work of the catchers has been the most pleasing feature of the Crackers' play. Pat Graham, as has been contended in this column all along, is a real ball player, and he is now showing it every day. Joe Dunn, while not as fleet as Harry Bailey and Tommy Long, is a good man to have wearing the mask. Joe knows a lot of ball and can hit once in a while.

There is no use mentioning the outfield and remainder of the infield beyond to say they are living up to expectations.

TODAY

MEMPHIS, April 28.—With a record of a double-header won by the Mobile team yesterday, Memphis and visitors will play a third game this afternoon under ideal weather conditions.

Kissinger and Snell will be in the battery position for Memphis, and Roger or Campbell and Brown for Mobile.

NEW ORLEANS, April 28.—Williams or Swindell pitching and Angemeier behind the plate will be the New Orleans battery against Montgomery in the third game of the series Monday. Manager Dobbs announces Paige and Gribbens for the visitors.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 28.—Bright skies and mild breezes prevailed on the morning of the second game between the Lookouts and Barons. Moore and Street will do battery work for Chattanooga and Pitney and Diiger will work for the Barons.

MAYER NOT TO RETURN

Erskine Mayer, former star Tech pitcher and at one time hurler for the Atlanta club, seems likely to stick in the big league, with the result that the local team will probably lose his services this season.

When Atlanta sold Mayer to the Philadelphia Nationals last year, it was on the agreement that they could retain him until May 1 and keep his services, but that he would have to be returned to the locals by that time. So far Atlanta has heard nothing from the Philly manager in regard to sending Mayer back here.

The reason is evident. Mayer is just naturally making good. His great game the other day against Brooklyn, which many authorities declare was a no-hit battle, would alone give him a berth on the Phillie pitching staff.

Marathons Are Beneficial

BOSTON, Mass., April 28.—Marathon races are beneficial to young athletes rather than injurious, in the opinion of Dr. J. H. Cunningham, Jr., an expert examiner of the Boston Athletic association, as given in the current issue of the association's official organ.

Dr. Cunningham said that during the seventeen years he has had medical supervision of the contests in the association's annual Marathon, he has not had a case of even slight injurious effects from the race.

"The best physical condition is essential," said Dr. Cunningham. "In fact conditions of the runners finishing this twenty-five-mile race is quite as good as usually seen in runners after a quarter or half-mile run."

Jackets Play Wake Forest

Good College Game Booked for Monday Afternoon at the Tech Flats

The Tech baseball squad is back from the trip to Alabama and Monday afternoon at Tech flats gets in action against the hard hitting Wake Forest team. This Wake Forest team is no bloomer by any means, and those who get out to the game will see plenty of real baseball.

The Jacket nine is right now working hard to get in trim for the big games with the University of Georgia and the Wake Forest game will be a good chance for Coach Heisman to give his men a thorough test on their own field. Some of the boys have been going decidedly ragged of late and a number of workouts will have to be taken on to get them to going again at their natural clip.

The game Monday will be started at 3:30 o'clock. Wake Forest is coming determined to show the Georgia fans that good baseball is played in the Carolinas Wake Forest now holds the championship of the two Carolinas, and is out to take back a Georgia scalp or so.

LOOKOUTS GET A NEW OUTFIELDER

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 28.—The local club has secured Outfielder Thrasher from the Columbus club of the American association. Thrasher was the star hitter of the Appalachian league for two seasons.

Third Baseman Jimmy Gillespie, who has been in the hospital for the past week as the result of an injury to his leg, will leave Sunday night to join the Lookouts in Birmingham. He will appear in Monday's game.

RECORD MADE BY OLDFIELD

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., April 28.—Barney Oldfield lowered the world's one-mile dirt track record Sunday at the $100,000 race track here He circled the course from a flying start in 46 2-5 seconds.

The former record was established at Brighton Beach September 7, 1912, when Oldfield made the mile in 47 4-5 seconds

Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. vs. Murray Gin Co.

In the opening game of the season in the Manufacturers' league, the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company defeated the Murray Gin company in a fast and interesting game. Score, 4 to 2.

Score by innings:	R.

President Murphy has offered Pitcher Rufus Gilbert to Denver for $1,500, which is a pretty fair price for a player who has been in class B company for 10 years or more.

First Baseman Ernest Gust, formerly a tryout with the Atlanta Crackers, and last season finishing up with Frankfort, in the Blue Grass league, has been signed by Savannah.

UMPS WRONG ONE TIME AND RIGHT THE OTHER

In the last Atlanta-Chattanooga game up Ponce de Leon park there were two out of the ordinary rulings which came up for decision and on one the umpires —Breitenstein and Kerin—were right, while the other was decidedly balled. The first came when a thrown ball struck the umpire and allowed a runner to score, and the other was when Manager Elberfeld wished to place Summers in the outfield when he had just taken him from the box by placing More on the slab.

It was the ruling of the umpire allowing Elberfeld to score from first when he was hit by a thrown ball, which was ruled incorrectly. Elberfeld should have been sent back to his base, Rule 55, Section 4 stating that a base runner shall return to his base in such a case. This rule reads "If the person or clothing of the umpire interferes with the catcher in an attempt to throw, or the umpire be struck by a ball thrown by the catcher or other fielder to intercept a base runner."

As it happened Bausewein threw to second to catch Elberfeld stealing, and the ball struck Umpire Kerwin just before it reached Dobard, who was covering second. At hitting the umpire the ball bounded to the outfield and Elberfeld scored and the run was allowed, while an interpretation of the rules plainly shows that Elberfeld should be sent back to first base.

The other ruling was correct, and came when Summers was taken from the box and not allowed to go to left field in place of Massey. Kid kicked on this decision, yet it was correct. When Summers was taken from the slab Elberfeld told the umpire that More would relieve Summers, which put Summers out of the game. Had he said More would relieve Massey it would then have been all right to place Summers in left and use More anywhere on the field.

Frank Claims New Cracker Will Be Fight

New Orleans Mogul Claims He Put in Claim for Player in February in Keeping With Commission Ruling

It looks as if Atlanta will have trouble in retaining Shortstop E. Williams, who was Saturday turned over by the Washington club and is now here with the club ready to play, Charles Frank, of New Orleans, having filed claim for the player. It is Frank's contention that he filed his claim by February 1 and is entitled to Williams before he is passed to any other Class A club.

A glance at the minor league claims shows that Frank did put in a claim for Williams, and under this rule he is entitled to the player unless he agrees to waive in favor of Atlanta. Not only did Frank put in a claim for Williams, but Portland and Omaha did likewise. Under a recent ruling of the national commission any club wishing a drafted player can file a claim before February 1 and in this way get first chance at him. In case he is turned adrift by the major team. Frank complied with this rule and may get the man. However, Portland being a Class AA club has a claim over Frank, though it is not known whether this will be pressed or not.

Williams arrived in Atlanta Sunday and is now ready to play jam-up ball. He looks to be in shape, going at a good clip during the Monday morning workout. Unless the Cracker team receives an official notice not to play Williams he will be in Monday's game.

It is possible that Griffith can arrange with New Orleans to waive claim on Williams, though right now Frank claims he will take his claim to the authorities. He says he is anxious to get the boy and will fight it to the end. Atlanta, too, wants Williams and won't sit idly by and let him go without a fight. The matter has been taken up with Frank and may soon be arranged so he can stay here.

VERSE REVISIONS.

IF WILLIAM COWPER HAD BEEN WILLIAM KLEM OR WILLIAM EVANS.

I am monarch of all I can sense;
My word there is none to dislike;
From the platter all round to the fence—
I am lord of the foul and the strike.
O Solitude! where are the chants
That highbrows have lamped in thy face?
Better dwell on the stillest of farms
Than reign in this horrible place.

I am out of humanity's reach;
I must go to my lodging alone;
There is no one to think me a peach—
There are many to call me a bone.
The boobs and the simps and the chumps
My form with indifference see;
They are so unacquainted with umps
Their aloofness is shocking to me.

Society, Friendship and Love—
Some trio, receive it from me.
O had I the wings of a dove,
How fast would I fly to them three!
My worries I then might assuage
In the realms of the Drammer or Art;
I might be a bear on the stage,
Or I might be a Harry Grant Dart.

Conversation! What treasure unwrit
Resides in that heavenly stunt!
More precious than doping a hit,
More pleasant than watching a bunt.
But the sound of the quirk and the quip
These listening ears never heard—
I must keep a stiff lower lip
And hear not a tenth o' a word.

Ye fans who have yelled for my blood,
Who say that I pillage and rob,
Do ye think that I year for the mud?
Do ye deem I am stuck on my job?
My friends, do they now and then send
A word to my desolate spot?
O tell me I yet have a friend—
I'll give 8 to 3 I have not.

Now the fan has returned to his flat,
And the player has gone to his home;
O had I a tough enough bat,
I'd wallop myself on the dome!
"There's mercy in every place,"
Said Cowper. I get up to state:
There's no mercy umpiring the base,
And there's less of it back of the plate.

GET OUT THE MASON JARS.

Already some of the Cassandras who like to dip, not to say plunge, into the briny dope, have confided, some of them in the more or less public prints, that the batteries for the first game of the world series of 1913 will be Mathewson and Meyers, and Coombs and Lapp. It might be so, though if it happens that way Walter Johnson, Joe Wood, Marty O'Toole and even young Jimmy Lavender would be making entirely different and more economical plans for next winter.

Also, if those are to be the batteries, a great many of the scribes will have a large and alligator-pear-shaped time of it. Writing fluff about pitching probabilities the day of a big game is one thing, but doing it year after year about the same probs. is an antipodal proposition, not to articulate something else again.

Georgia and Vandy Look to Have Edge

Series Between These Two Nines Should Decide the S. I. A. A. Honors for the 1913 Season—Others Strong

Now that the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association season is about over, it seems that Georgia and Vanderbilt have the two little teams in college circles. Georgia's defeat of Alabama for two straights, and Alabama's subsequent defeat of Mercer about puts the latter two teams out of the running. Vanderbilt is the only other team which has not met defeat so far, and so it looks as if some mixup were coming off on Sandford Field when the Commodores meet the Red and Black in Athens next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Not much dope has been dirtting down this far about Vanderbilt, but from the scores of her games it looks as if she has her usual good aggregation of ball players. However, the loss of Wilson Collins, their star spitter, the Commodores are not nearly such a dangerous factor.

Cunningham's lads, although it looked at first as if they would be minus sinbmen, have rounded into form, and are taking games right along. Whichever way you want to place your money, there will be a royal scrap for it.

Right at present the Red and Black is engaging in a form of warfare which will not be advantageous to them in the struggle with Vanderbilt. They are making a tour through the west, playing the big teams up there one each day. This is a hard row for a college team to hoe, and as they do not return to Athens from this trip until tomorrow they will doubtless be rather the worse for wear.

If, without Collins, Vanderbilt's pitchers can stop the wonderful aggregation of swatters that the Georgia team seems to have, they will win. However, any man on the Georgia team is dangerous in a pinch, and up to the time of leaving on their trip the team was averaging ten hits to a game.

The Georgia infield is also going at a great clip. Built as it is entirely of new men, it looked weak at first, but Clements at short and Big John Henderson at first are veritable terrors, robbing opposing batsmen of many hits. Clements has also turned out to be one of Georgia's steadiest hitters. Gino McWhorter and Clements will keep Vanderbilt's catchers on the ragged edge when they get on bases, for there is not a faster trio on a college team today.

Should Georgia win from Vanderbilt—that does not affect the Georgia-Tech series which is shortly to follow. There is no doing a meeting of the Jackets and the Red and Black. Either of these teams are extremely liable to upset the advance speculations, and whether she wins or loses, Georgia will have to keep moving to get away with Heisman's lads at the end of the season.

Gallagher Works For Investigation

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Ty Cobb's agreement with the Detroit baseball club will not deter Representative Gallagher, of Illinois, from pressing his proposed congressional investigation of the so-called "baseball trust." Mr. Gallagher conferred with members of the rules committee to learn what the chances were for hearings on his resolution as soon as the tariff is disposed of.

Representative Hardwick, of Georgia, declared he had abandoned his intention to introduce a similar resolution because of the agreement between Cobb and the Detroit management.

Jonathans Pull Triple Play and Win Game

The Jonathans won a hotly contested game from West End Baracas Saturday afternoon by the score of 13 to 12. The features of the game were the triple play pulled off by the Jonathans in the third inning, Armstrong spearing a line drive to first, tagging the runner on first and then getting the runner on second by a peg to that bag—and Myers' stick work for West End, two of his three hits being for the circuit.

Old Stakes at Racing Meet

Announced That Old Rewards Will Be Offered at the Saratoga Track

NEW YORK, April 28.—Now that the dates for the racing season have been decided upon, the Saratoga association is announced that all of the old stake fixtures will be renewed for the Spa track meeting August 2 to 30, inclusive.

Liberal ideas will prevail and the values of events will be on a par with the offerings of 1909. The details have not been worked out yet, but full announcement will be made shortly. That the season at Saratoga will take on much of its oldtime brilliancy and glory is predicted on all sides. Already the applications for boxes have been coming in at a lively rate.

The opening of the new steeplechase left Bay Park, Hewlett, L. I., will start the hunt racing for the season and will of the Rockaway Hunting club at Hewlett be held on Saturday, April 26 (today).

For many years this popular steeplechase meeting has been held at Cedarhurst, L. I., on what is known as the White Farm, but part of this property having been disposed of to a real estate company, the Rockaway Hunting club has abandoned the old course and through the generosity of Carlton Macy, the club has been able to secure for its annual meeting a beautiful stretch of country at Hewlett Bay Park.

A course approximating two miles long has been laid out, all the jumps can be seen from the club enclosure. The going could not be better, and it is wonderfully adapted for steeplechasing.

There will be a post and rail course and a regulation course for the hunters. The club enclosure, overlooking the start and finish, is situated on a small hill commanding a view of the entire course.

World's Record Lowered

PATERSON, N. J., April 27.—In winning the second heat of the sixty-yard sprint at the Elks' athletic carnival here tonight, Howard R. Drew, of the Springfield (Mass.) Training school, it was announced, lowered the world's record of 6 2-5 seconds by 1-5 of a second. There was some doubt, however, as to the accuracy of the timers' watches and no claim will be made for a new record.

JUST NOTES

The house of the New Jersey legislature has passed a bill permitting Sunday baseball, but at this writing there is some doubt as to the measure's fate in the senate.

"Baseball in Waterloo," remarks the Cedar Rapids Gazette. Ought to make a hit with the bull moosers. The entrance to the ball park is on Roosevelt street.

Billy Meyer, purchased from Jersey City by Elmira, has objected to the contract offered by Manager Ritter. Procrastination seems to be a habit with the Meyer family.

Pitcher Cote Cochran, sold by Spokane to Missoula, has declared his intention to stay at his home in West Virginia this year and not go out. He looked like a great pitcher last year until taken ill.

Jimmy Burke, with Lima last year, has been transferred to the Columbus team of the Interstate league, and Chick Long, also of the Lima 1912 aggregation, has been sent to Greensboro in the North Carolina league.

Harry Ball, who played the outfield for Danville in the Three-I league a couple of season's ago, died recently at Bucyrus, Ohio, from tuberculosis. Ball was drafted from Danville in 1911 by the Chicago Cubs and sent back.

Lou Criger, who caught under George Stallings on the New Yorks in 1910, says Stallings is one of the most capable baseball leaders in the business, and that in time he will make a real team of the Boston Nationals.

Gordon Winner Over G. M. C. Nine

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 28.—Gordon institute turned the tables on Georgia Military college here Saturday afternoon and won 9 to 4. Only specfiecular plays of the game were made by locals, Lanier making two-bagger in the fifth with the bases full, and a double play in the seventh, followed by triple play in the ninth.

Batteries: McCord, Bankston, Harold; Sanders and Nunnally.

Pitcher Winn Noyes cut his studies short at Northwestern university and joined the Boston Braves before the season opened.

Sunday Ball Played In City of Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md., April 28.—For the first time in many years an effort to play a championship baseball game in this vicinity on Sunday was made yesterday afternoon. It was frustrated by a rain, which put a stop to play between the Baltimore and Buffalo clubs of the International league at the end of the second inning with the score 2 to 2.

Dunn's Park has been the scene of Sunday games between Baltimore and clubs of other leagues during the last two seasons. No admission was charged, but the baseball people saw that every one who got in purchased a fan or something to eat equaling the regular price of admission. Yesterday, however, regular tickets with rain checks were sold and the police did not interfere.

FIVE TRACK STARS FROM B. H. S. MEET RIVERSIDE

A bunch of track artists from the Boys' High school will journey up to Riverside on May 17, there to meet a team from R. M. A. in a field meet.

The Boys' Hi team will be composed of only five men, the team which they meet will be composed of an equal number. Arrangements for this affair have been in progress for some time, but have not just been completed. As B. H. S. can take but five men to Gainesville, Riverside agreed to use but five in the meet.

The result will be that the men competing the teams will be worked somewhat overtime, as it is proposed to include all regular track events in the program. There will be the dashes, the hurdles, the weight events and the long runs.

The team which will go from the local school is composed of Rosser, Lochridge, Newman, Neal and Lopez, all of whom showed fine form in the recent field day held here between B. H. S. and T. H. S.

The Riverside stars are Hickman, McNeill, Williamson, Ray and Bass. It is their proud boast that they can lick any other five men prep team in the south. The high school boys will try to disprove this theory.

Another trip which high school will take before going to Riverside is to Stone Mountain on the 10th. This meet should get them in good shape for the other, and will give them a foretaste of what's coming.

CHASE WILL PLAY FIRST

NEW YORK, April 28.—Manager Frank Chance, of the New York American league team, after several days' artist service at first base, will lay off again for a while and Hal Chase will return to the corner of the diamond with which he is most familiar, beginning with tomorrow's game, according to announcement last night. Chance has been ordered by Trainer Barett to rest until his injued leg is in good shap again. He has been advised that he should give up active work if he did not wish to become permanently disabled.

Leftvelt is booked to succeed Chase in center field, and Derrick, who has been nursing a smked hand, to get back into the game today at short.

With the return of Chrisrom to his out Pieper, of the Lawfield league, team, re- Anderson to make room for him.

Brockton, of the New England league, has signed a deaf and dumb third baseman named Nimmo, who comes recommended by Jack Kleinow, the veteran catcher.

SUCCESS FOR BIKE CHAMP

NEWARK, N. J., April 28.—Frank L. Kramer, the American racing cyclist, is back home from his European campaign.

The champion spoke enthusiastically about his trip abroad, which, he declared to have been the most successful racing campaign he had ever embarked on. So much is he pleased that he is going back again next year. He has a contract signed before he sailed, for a series of races, beginning February 1, and running until Easter Sunday, April 12. He says the European cycle crowds were the largest he ever saw.

Kramer will also very likely compete in the next Paris six-day race, which is set for the week of January 11. He will, he says, ride in the New York six-day race, which will probably be held the first week in December.

Kramer, who appears to have taken on a little flesh, says he is ready to break into the racing game here and has announced that he will ride at the Velodrome.

Kitty Knight, manager of the Ogden team, of the Union association, was recently operated upon for appendicitis and will not be able to take charge of his players for some time yet.

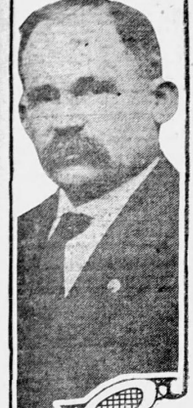
Hints on Care of Eggs and How Little Appreciated



AT this season of the year when many hens are beginning to set and will almost before you know it become broody and remain on the nest over night, a person cannot be too careful about collecting the eggs every day, and if the chickens are out on a free range on the farm almost before a person knows it they will have many eggs spoiled or begin germination if they are not gathered regularly every day. During winter and spring a person does not have to be so particular, but as soon as the first warm weather comes eggs, especially those that are fertile, will begin germination very quickly and they should be gathered regularly every day. Not only that, but they should be kept in a cool place after being gathered. Unless a person desires to continue to set eggs or have eggs to furnish for hatching purposes for others it is far better to remove the male birds from the females and especially from the females that you do not wish to set eggs from. By doing this there is no danger of getting any bad or fertile eggs in your regular shipments for market. A person cannot be too careful in this respect. A man may have a customer that he has been furnishing for months, and if he should happen to get one or two bad eggs in a shipment the customer will lose confidence and will never have the same feeling afterwards about the freshness of eggs that they previously had. A person should be very careful in selecting their eggs, having them clean, strictly fresh and put up in nice packages for delivery to his regular daily trade.

The quality of eggs on nearly every market in the south has in the past two years been much improved, and nowadays the price is cut several cents per dozen on eggs that have not been properly cared for and do not come to market in a nice presentable condition. This has been largely brought about by people paying more attention to their egg production and it is well that they have as the prices quoted during the past few years has warranted giving this extra care and attention to the egg products of this country. They have been found profitabe and run into thousands of dollars for the producers, and every extra cent per dozen added to the price of this product means profit to the producer. And, the consumer who is paying more per dozen now than in former years is really getting better value because they are getting a better product than in former years with less waste and one that they can depend on with more certainty than was once offered to the general public. The egg crop of Georgia has not confined has not materialized in actual value in the past few years and while it is but little appreciated, especially by the business people, it brings in the revenue and income to this country that if they were removed it certainly would affect hundreds of people and cut their maintenance down to such an extent that it would certainly be missed. This industry is gradually growing year by year and if a strict account of the actual production of eggs in the state of Georgia there was known it would surprise many to know how much in dollars and cents it amounts to. It looks to be a little insignificant thing but it runs into millions and is today being appreciated more than ever.

One of the surprising things connected with the upbuilding and welfare of this country is that our law makers and men who have the welfare of the country at heart cannot see the need of and maintenance of more educational work for the poultry industry the same as they can see for other farm and agricultural products. There are but few states outside of Georgia that appropriate a substantial amount to carry out the poultry work that should be done more largely than it is at present and in most of our southern states it receives but little attention. Our fruit industry, the cotton and corn industries, soil survey and many other things, while important, do not mean any more to us in dollars and cents than the poultry industry, and there is no comparison to the amount invested and the number of people employed in producing these other necessities compared to the work, money and time employed in the poultry industry. But, as poultry does well naturally over many of the southern states I suppose most people think that it does not require much study, therefore this industry does not receive the support and attention that it should, although it brings in thousands of dollars in revenue that but few people realize how much it does amount to.

Yours very truly,

Lamy Reams

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERED.

QUESTION.

For some time I have been reading every bit of your writing on poultry and enjoy it so much as I am a Rhode Island crank. This is only my second year and I am wanting a little information. I want to enter some in our Thomasville fair this fall and want to know just how to feed and care for them till then. I mean young ones. I have the Thompkin strain and think I have some good ones. I have had one, now, very fine cock mated with pullets that are very fine shape and long bodies, splendid layers and am raising some from these. Now I have one pen of pullets good color but with some smut mated with a cockerel very red and long-bodied but under color too light, and have raised some, or am raising some of these.

Now I feed my laying hens on scratch feed, enough at night in a fine straw bed for supper and breakfast. At daylight they are scratching and at dinner I feed a crumbly mash of scraps from table, soaked in milk or water, and make it as dry as possible to crumble by mixing Purina chowder feed. I also keep fresh water, oyster shell and chowder feed mash dry before them at all times. I am feeding little chicks on small chick feed till about a month old, then allow them dry mash. All my chickens are on a patch of green oats at all times. I am having a patch planted now of saffe corn, chicken corn, sunflower seed, some velvet beans and rape. Is this all right?

Thanking you, I am,

A READER.

ANSWER.

The method you are using in feeding is all that is necessary to make your chickens good for exhibition purposes. There is one thing you will have to be careful about. When it becomes hot during August and September, it will be a good idea for you to take the birds that you expect to exhibit and keep them in a shady run to keep the sun from taking the oil out of the plumage. Good feed is the important thing in raising exhibition birds.

QUESTION.

Ridgeville, Ga.—You so promptly and kindly replied to my first letter that I am again taxing your good nature.

Please tell me what quantity of crude carbolic acid to put in gallon of water to make a spray for nests and chicken coops.

I have had several chickens that drooped around for a day or two and then died when I went to doctor them a watery substance would run from their mouths, which was very offensive. They died. What ailed them?

Please tell me if I must just leave eggs unaired after turning and airing them first day in incubator. The instructions do not say if they must be taken out any more.

Thanking you in advance for your kindness, I am

MRS. T. A. B.

ANSWER.

One quart of crude carbolic acid to five gallons of whitewash, or water is sufficient for a good disinfectant.

The chickens referred to evidently have gotten their system out of condition, probably by eating something that did not agree with them, or drinking filthy water. Physic them out good with Bee Dee Stock powders.

The eggs should not be turned or the machine opened after the 19th day.

QUESTION.

Statham, Ga., Eastman, Ga.—

I am a subscriber to The Journal and wrote to you before.

I have some pigeons. Some of them got sick and became droopy and died in a few days. They had a white sprouting in their throats. I feed them on scratch feed and wheat bran mash. Any light on this subject will be appreciated as I would not like to lose any more.

Thanking you in advance, I am

H. H.

ANSWER.

The pigeons had what is known as canker. You should use permanganate of potash, two grains to one gallon of drinking water, or one-half teaspoonful of carbolic acid to two gallons of awter. They should be fed no bran or mash but should have nothing but wheat and cracked corn with peas. Rock salt should be kept before them at all times, and they should have plenty of sunlight.

McCord-Stewart Company Leases Five Floors of New A., B. & A. Freight Depot at Hunter and Haynes Streets—New Y. M. C. A. Plans Filed With the Building Inspector, County Begins Repaving of Peachtree at Sixth Street

The migratory tendency of big business in Atlanta is further illustrated in the announcement that the McCord-Stewart company, which sold its Decatur street property to the Georgia Railway and Power company, had leased five floors of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic freight depot at Haynes and Hunter streets. The company leased from the railroad direct.

The term of the lease is for five years, but the consideration was not made public.

The company takes almost the entire building, which is 100 feet long and has five stories. There are ample trackage facilities to the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, and the new location is admirably suited to a wholesale business.

There is a pronounced trend of manufacturing and jobbing concerns, which require railroad frontage to locations on the west side, whose low values until lately have been overlooked.

Another movement is of wholesale concerns from central locations to the between the terminals district or to Whitehall street, their old quarters being taken by retail concerns.

ATLANTA DEPUTY IN LOUISIANA FOR KRAUSS

Marcel Krauss Wanted for Indictment Charging Attempted Murder of Mrs. Ramsey

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
NEW ORLEANS, La., April 28.—Newt A. Garner, a deputy of Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey's office, of Atlanta, with Howard McCalep, a New Orleans lawyer, left here today for Baton Rouge with requisition papers seeking Governor Hall's signature authorizing the return to Atlanta of Marcel Krauss.

Krauss is the man expected here when they return from Baton Rouge. Krauss will attempt to evade requisition by habeas corpus proceedings, it is believed. The officers here today feel sure that the charges against him are blackmail.

Marcel Krauss was indicted by the grand jury of the Fulton superior court April 11, charged with assault with intent to murder. Mrs. C. L. Ramsey is prosecutrix. She alleges that he administered a drug to her with criminal intent. A bench warrant was sworn out for him immediately following his indictment.

Krauss was arrested in Atlanta by detectives but up to noon today no trace had been found of the Barwick children or the man and woman, who are alleged to have taken them away from home.

A canvass was also made of all hotels and lodging houses.

Mattiford is described as being five feet ten inches tall, and weighs about 220 pounds. He is bald-headed, stands erect, and has a protruding blue eyes. No description was given of his clothing, except that he usually wears a derby hat.

Mrs. Jeter is described as forty-three years old, five feet seven inches tall, and weighs about 160 pounds.

She has light complexion, red hair and blue eyes.

POLICE SEARCH FOR MATTIFORD AT CAPITAL

Alleged Kidnapers of Barwick Children From Atlanta Looked for in Washington

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Police today are conducting a thorough search of the city for John D. Mattiford, fifty-three years old, and Mrs. Jeter, forty-three, who are wanted in Atlanta, Ga., on charges of kidnaping.

Atlanta authorities asked the police here to co-operate in the search for them, declaring the couple have in their custody Dorothy Barwick, nine years old, and her brother John A., aged five. None of the details of the kidnaping are given by the Atlanta police in the letter received at headquarters, except that the couple are believed to have come north with the children, and it is was thought Washington was their destination.

All incoming trains as well as steamboat wharves were closely watched by detectives, but up to noon today no trace had been found of the Barwick children or the man and woman, who are alleged to have taken them away from home.

A canvass was also made of all hotels and lodging houses.

Mattiford is described as being five feet ten inches tall, and weighs about 220 pounds. He is bald-headed, stands erect, and has a protruding blue eyes. No description was given of his clothing, except that he usually wears a derby hat.

SULTAN AIDS PEACE IN THE PHILIPPINES

Major John P. Finley, U. S. A., Is Believed to Have Enlisted Head of Mohammedans

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Bearing the message of the sultan of Turkey, head of the Mohammedan faith, to the members of that religion in the Philippines, Major John P. Finley, U. S. A., is believed by the war department to be on his way back from Constantinople to the archipalago with the sultan's assurances that the United States is friendly to the Mohammedans and that their religion will not be attacked. The assurance is expected to put an end to the trouble in that part of the Philippines.

Major Finley was permitted to go on a special mission to Constantinople in an effort to enlist the sultan's aid in the cause of peace. He was governor of Zamboanga, and since his departure a civilian has been appointed to the post. Unless another vacancy is found before the officer arrives in the islands he will be ordered back to this country to resume duty as an infantry regiment.

The officer has made a remarkable record in the islands as an executive official. His familiarity with the Mohammedans and his knowledge of the customs of the tribesmen have done much to preserve peace and advance the influence of the United States with the Filipino people in the Mohammedan section of the islands.

CURETON LIQUOR CASE BEFORE SUPREME COURT

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The supreme court of the United States will hear arguments in the Cureton liquor case tomorrow. Sam P. Maddox, of Dalton, is here to appear for the defendant, George W. Cureton, of Dade county, who was convicted before Judge Felton some two years ago for violating the state prohibition law.

The case involved the alleged violation of the interstate commerce act. The prohibition of the manufacture of liquor as a beverage by the states is legal, but it has never decided whether it is legal to prohibit the manufacture of liquor for medical purposes.

COLUMBUS COMPLETES TRADE BOARD CAMPAIGN

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 28.—The final canvass to place the Columbus board of trade upon an eight thousand dollar basis, with a view of employing an expert as general secretary, creating an office of freight traffic and injecting new life and enthusiasm into the organization, took place today and, according to Judge S. Price Gilbert, president of the board, it proved most successful in every way.

There is no doubt in regard to outcome of the campaign, which has been most gratifying to members of the commercial body. It is stated that C. C. Thomas will be the new secretary of the freight bureau. The general secretary has not been determined upon.

CAPT. CLAYTON ROASTS COUNTY PAVING METHODS

Says County Board Bought Asphalt Without Specifications and Without Analysis

That the Fulton county commissioners, in buying asphalt for 1913, had no specification prepared, notified only a few favored bidders and then awarded a contract without chemical analysis of the samples, is the charge contained in a statement issued Monday by Captain R. M. Clayton, chief of the city construction department, by way of reply to the interview of Chairman Smith, chairman of the county board, which was published Sunday.

Last Saturday Captain Clayton informed the county board that he would refuse to approve bills for asphalt laid in the county on contract price of $21.75 per ton were paid for the asphalt.

Chairman Smith came back Sunday morning with the statement that the board were determined not to lay any more cheap pavement and that if Captain Clayton didn't like the board's methods the board could and would remove the county forces from the city.

Captain Clayton now answers Chairman Smith with the charge as above stated and the further charge that the county is paying an exorbitant price for asphalt inferior to asphalt purchased by the city for considerably less.

The clayton statement was not published in full, so his stenographer furnished the papers with a synopsis of the salient points.

COMPLETION OF SPECIFICATIONS.

It appears from Chairman Smith's interview that he believes natural asphalt to be the only kind worth putting down, while Captain Clayton maintains that manufactured, or artificial, asphalt is just as good, if not better.

Captain Clayton, in his statement, says all the present asphalt pavement in Atlanta was laid with natural asphalt and has not shown the long wearing qualities claimed by Chairman Smith for this kind of material.

He says the city, in purchasing asphalt for repaving, has made standard specifications, and only changed them in one particular, which was purposely to let in natural asphalt.

He says samples of natural and samples of artificial asphalt were submitted, and forwarded by his department to the Pratt laboratory of Atlanta for analysis.

He says the Pratt laboratory analyzed the samples and reported that all samples of natural asphalt submitted to them by contractors were sent the samples to Dow & Smith, chemists of New York, for that analysis.

Dow & Smith, he says, made only analyzed for ductility, but also reviewed the whole analysis, and reported that the best samples of all submitted were those of artificial asphalts. In analyzing, Dow & Smith were not supposed to know the names of the various samples or the companies submitting them, as the samples were identified only by numbers.

"Number 2" was pronounced by Dow & Smith to be the best, and it was the sample of the Texas Oil company, whose bid was the lowest, $21.75 per ton f. o. b. Lithonia, making the city's total cost $28 per ton. Analysis of Bermudez, he says, shows 15 per cent ash, which is worthless, and, therefore, the city is paying $28 per ton for 85 per cent, 1,700 pounds of bitumen, and at this rate the county is paying $44 per ton for bitumen.

As to the Trinidad asphalt (another natural brand) which the county proposes to buy at $25 per ton f. o. b. New Orleans, plus $3.28 per ton freight, Capt. Clayton says analysis shows Trinidad to contain 27 per cent ash, at which rate the county will pay $39 per ton for bitumen.

All of which, Capt. Clayton concludes, ought to convince the public that the city is getting better material for $21.75 per on than the county is getting for $44 and $39 per ton.

As to Chairman Smith withdrawing the county forces from the city, Capt. Clayton says over such "baby acts" he has no control, but that the county board cannot force him to approve bills on the assessment plan against the property owners, for asphalt which he considers inferior in quality and exorbitant in price.

Capt. Clayton closes with the charge, as above stated, that the county board had no specifications or analysis and only "let it" to favored bidders, and remarks that Chairman Smith, with only two years experience as a county commissioner, seems to think he has become expert on a subject which scientific specialists in paving materials have puzzled and worked with for years.

An Abridged Bible

(From the Gallipolis Tribune.)

An abridged Bible is being advocated—one that will contain only the vital parts of the great book, and that omits hundreds of pages of matter now not read at all except by students. No doubt such a Bible would become instantly popular, because it would all be interesting and to the point. In this age none except students will wade through very long books. Everybody wants the truth boiled down to the very shortest space. The great story of creation told in very few words, and all the essentials of the Bible for the younger person could easily be covered in one-fifth of the pages required for the whole work.

CHILD LABOR EXHIBIT IS AN IMPRESSIVE FEATURE

Free Exhibit at 122 Peachtree Shows Working Conditions That Children Find

An exhibit of child labor conditions is one of the really big features of the Southern Sociological congress now assembled in Atlanta. The exhibit is in a store room at 122 Peachtree street, opposite the Candler building; but the organization which it represents is partnership within the congress itself, its officers being among the leaders in the child labor division.

Miss Lewis Franchowitz, exhibitor for the National Child Labor committee, is in charge of the exhibit at 122 Peachtree street. The collection was gathered from thirty-nine states, and no picture in it represents a condition that is more than one year old. The photographs show children working in factories—in "glass blowing establishments, in coal mines, in cotton manufactories, in the "street trades" (night messenger service, peddling newspapers, etc.), and in the shrimp and oyster industries, and in the New York canning industries. One set shows cranberry pickers at their work, another shows young boys in messenger uniforms amid depressing surroundings in the slums of big cities, and others show related conditions. A few show model conditions, pointing to how child-employing industries ought to be.

"But the public knows generally what the conditions ought to be," says Miss Franchowitz. "What it does not know is conditions as they are. That is what this exhibit is to show first of all. With the committee seeks to show first of all with this exhibit—in order that public sentiment may be educated to the point where it will demand amelioration of those conditions."

The purpose of the committee, says Miss Franchowitz, is to improve the working conditions of children; to win better working hours and shorter hours; to give the children a chance to obtain an elementary education at least.

One striking contrast among the charts is in that one which shows the states that have compulsory education laws as against those which have not those laws. Georgia appears in the latter class.

The exhibit is open to the public, and admission is entirely free, from 10 o'clock a. m. to 9 o'clock p. m. Tuesday evening, when the social congress session adjourns, it will be closed. It is the largest and most complete of several similar educational exhibits which the National Child Labor committee is showing constantly throughout the United States. Last month, in Jacksonville during the ninth annual conference there on child labor over 4,000 people inspected the exhibit that now is on display at 122 Peachtree.

GEORGIA CONVICT SYSTEM IS SEVERELY CRITICISED

W. H. Whitaker, Prison Warden, at Sociological Congress Makes Observations

That stripes are humiliating to convicts and a disgrace to civilization, and should be done away with; that the sanitary condition of the convict camps is "shocking;" and that a higher type of men should be employed as guards—

These are some of the indictments against Georgia's convict system, based upon observation of the convicts in Fulton county, by W. H. Whittaker, warden of the convict farm at Ocmulgee, Va., who is attending the Sociological congress.

Mr. Whittaker paid a visit Sunday morning to one of the Fulton county convict camps, accompanied by Louis J. Bernhardt and J. L. Strain, other delegates to the congress.

After the visit he said: "The main trouble with the camp I saw is that it is really unsanitary. It needs more whitewash on the outside and a coat of paint on the inside, and some trees and flowers to make it livable. There should be running water there, too. It is a bad enough for the men to drink out of buckets, as they do, but to have to wash in the same water is awful. The camp should have a dining room with some clean dishes. There ought to be shower baths. Five or six men taking a bath in the same water in a small tub at that, could never be considered sanitary.

"In my prison experience I have made a practice of never humiliating a man placed under me if I can possibly avoid it. Stripes are about as humiliating as anything can be, and to work men on the streets in stripes, as you do here, is disgraceful. I like a dark gray cloth, which is serviceable and neat in appearance. Also, we use no handcuffs or shackles, though I notice you still use them.

"I learn that you whip the men with a seven-pound whip, and that efforts are even being made to have the prisoners—as the convicts are—beat each other. This is as humiliating as anything can be, and to work men on the streets in stripes, as you do here, is disgraceful. I like a dark gray cloth, which is serviceable and neat in appearance. Also, we use no handcuffs or shackles, though I notice you still use them.

"I learn that you whip the men with a seven-pound whip, and that efforts are even being made to have the prisoners—as the convicts are—beat each other. This is as humiliating as anything can be, and is disgraceful to civilization.

"In my opinion you work your men too long. We work our men only nine hours a day. I am informed you work yours from sun till sun.

"You ought to have better men for guards. You can't expect to get the right sort of men for $1.50 per day. You need men of intelligence, men of morals and courage. In short, men who can lead and uplift, as well as 'tote' a gun.

"To be candid, I think you need to wake up right at home to some disgraceful conditions."

SOUTHERNER URGES CONGRESS TO WAR AGAINST JAPANESE

"War Speech" Is Delivered in Congress Monday by Representative Sisson, of Mississippi on Jap Land Question

WE MUST NOT SUBMIT TO JAPS' INDIGNITY, HE SAYS

Declares That He Is With the People of California in Their Fight to Prevent Aliens From Owning Land

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A "war speech" in support of the proposed California anti-alien land law was delivered in the house today by Representative Sisson, of Mississippi.

"If we must have war or submit to this indignity, I am for war," cried Mr. Sisson. "I am with the people of California in their efforts to prevent these aliens from acquiring land."

SHADES OF WASHINGTON.

"I believe," said Mr. Sisson, "that no non-residental citizens should be allowed a single foot of land in the territory of the United States. What would Washington say in answer to the question, war or submission? What would Jackson say? What would Cleveland say? What would McKinley say?

"I resent the efforts of Japan to force us to submit to her demands."

Mr. Sisson took the position that the Japanese government in protesting against alien land legislation was endeavoring to exempt its citizens from the operation of the laws of states.

"The president and secretary of state," said Mr. Sisson, "should only assure an alien government that the people of that alien nation would be dealt with fairly in accordance with the law of the state. Any other position would lead to the federal government taking out from under the laws of the states the citizens of another nation. But all citizens or aliens resident in a state must be held subject to its laws, and to exempt the alien would give him privileges over and above those accorded to American citizens.

Representative Mann, the Republican leader, suggested the United States had the constitutional right to treat with foreign governments to secure for American citizens property rights abroad and that Mr. Sisson was contending that the foreign governments did not have a similar right.

Mr. Sisson contended that the people of California had the right to pass laws regarding alien holding of land as in their judgment seemed best when such laws did not infringe upon federal constitution.

Secretary Bryan Arrives In Sacramento for Conference

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 28.—William J. Bryan, secretary of state, arrived in Sacramento today to confer with Governor Johnson and the California legislature on the proposed anti-alien land holding laws. Governor Johnson met the visitor at the train at which many Democratic legislators had gathered.

An hour after Secretary Bryan's arrival it was announced by Governor Johnson that he would call the two houses of the legislature in a joint executive session this morning to allow Mr. Bryan to deliver his official message. The meeting was called at the request of Mr. Bryan, said the governor.

Although he will spend much of his time at the governor's home, arrangements have been made for him to have an office at the capitol building where he will be accessible to callers.

Secretary Bryan made the following statement on his arrival.

"I am visiting California at the request of the president and with the consent of the legislature, to confer upon an important matter which, while local in its immediate effect, is international in character.

"Each state occupies a dual position. While it is the guardian of its domestic affairs, it is a member of the union and therefore interested in all that concerns the nation's relations with the outside world.

"The president, upon whom rests the constitutional duty of maintaining diplomatic relations with other countries, asked me to come to California to confer with the governor and legislators upon such phases of the subject as to touch this nation's relations to other nations.

"Coming on such a mission, it would be obviously improper to say anything in advance upon questions which may enter into the conference."

Secretary Bryan went to the capitol with Governor Johnson shortly before 10 o'clock and spent half an hour in the executive offices, where he was visited by several legislative leaders.

It was arranged that Mr. Bryan should take possession of Lieutenant Governor Wallace's fiices in the capitol. His first visitor was Dr. David Carr Jordon, of Stanford university, who came at Mr. Bryan's request to confer on the alien land situation.

Sisson discussed at length points of international law involved in the dispute and declared that California was endeavoring to do only what Japan had already done.

"If Japan now threatens us with war, what would she do when millions of her citizens have acquired land in our country?" he said. "I lay down the proposition that an alien population holding land within our borders would be a fixed and constant menace.

"We must preserve to the American farmer the right to own the soil of our country without competition which would drag down his standard of living. I would not surrender it unless we had spent the last drop of blood in American manhood and impoverished our country for a hundred generations."

"Treaty making can never deprive the states of a reserved power", continued Sisson.

"This California question is far reaching and important in its results. Nearly all the states have statutes regulating the right of aliens in reference to acquiring real estate. Nearly every state has some limitation.

"This Democratic administration should announce with no uncertain tone to the world the doctine that congress proposes the right of the people of these states to determine their own laws regarding land within the states and that the United States government will not prevent the states from making such land laws as they see fit and proper, provided they do not discriminate against citizens of the United States.

"If the president and senate should commit themselves to any other condition we will have internal broils at home and envious international complications and meddling into our domestic dissension occasioned by the constant complaints of the alien land owner to his own government.

"I accord to Japan all the equal rights with ourselves. I would as quickly resent a demand from our government upon Japan to permit an American citizen to own land in Japan contrary to the laws of Japan as I do now resent Japan's efforts to compel us to submit to her demnds. I think it the duty of every loyal citizen of all our states to stand for California and her rights in this fight for her own citizens and their descendants."

About half the membership of the house sat in amazement while Mr. Sisson, immediately after the session began, took the floor. Wearied with a week of routine tariff debate, members paid close attention to Mr. Sisson's argument and his speech was frequently interrupted by applause.

Neither the Japanese parliament, as such, nor the Japanese foreign office, contemplates sending a representative to Sacramento to take part in efforts to reach a satisfactory settlement of the pending alien land legislation.

A report to that effect grew out of a proposition by opposition delegates in the Japanese assembly that they themselves should dispatch a representative to California, in a private capacity, without any government status whatever, with the sole purpose of consulting with the Japanese residents, for the information of the party leaders at home.

Ex-Senator Bailey Vents His Spleen On the Newspapers

GALENA Ill., April 26.—Former Senator Bailey advised voters to cast their ballots without regard to politics and attacked the press of the country in his address before the U. S. Grant memorial association here today. Mr. Bailey lauded the character and services of General Grant and Abraham Lincoln.

"Lincoln believed in the government as our fathers ordained it," he said. "George Washington believed in the constitution and they called him a patriot. I believe in it and they call me a 'poser.'

"Let the Republicans nominate their best men, the Democrats theirs, and the Progressives theirs. Then vote for the best man of the three."

Mr. Bailey warned his hearers against newspapers as the greatest enemies of public peace in existence today.

PRESIDENT MAY FAVOR FREE TOLLS IN PANAMA

Wilson Has Partly Changed Mind on Subject as Is Now on the Fence

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—President Wilson has come part way over on the question of tolls on domestic commerce through the Panama canal.

In the beginning he was quoted, as were many other college professors, the Carnegie peace foundation and other interests reached by big money, as entertaining the conviction that the United States must live up to its treaty obligations, even with the expense of adding to the burdens of all the people of the country. But today President Wilson said:

"I have found there is another side of the question, and I am not prepared to say which I believe has superior merit."

The president added that he proposed to give the subject further study.

It was observed at the time Congressman Doremus presented the argument in favor of free tolls to the president that Mr. Wilson perceived much in what Mr. Doremus said that never before had been brought to his attention. The president found time to study the speech with which Mr. Doremus won his fight for free tolls in the house over the opposition of the majority of the committee from which the Panama bill emanated.

The recent argument of Richard Olney, Cleveland's last secretary of state, in favor of free tolls, also must have had an effect upon President Wilson, as it is known that the president has a high regard for Mr. Olney's judgment on matters of international moment. The president's attempt to make Mr. Olney ambassador to Great Britain, of course, demonstrates this, but that is not the only evidence of Mr. Wilson's appreciation of Mr. Olney's soundness on questions involving the foreign relations of the United States. He makes no secret of his belief that the Massachusetts member of the Cleveland cabinet is one of this country's ablest citizens.

Among those who heard the president's declaration that he intended to give more study to the tolls question before making up his mind was Henry J. Allen of Kansas, one of the big Bull Moosers of the middle west.

MONEY BEHIND PROTEST.

"I am not surprised that the president has learned that there is another side to the Panama canal tolls situation," said Mr. Allen.

"It was inelitable that he must sooner or later find out that a proposition that the transcontinental railroads of the United States and Canada plus Great Britain and Senator Root behind it, is not therefore necessarily settled. It could not help learning that the people of the United States never would have sanctioned the expenditure of the money for the construction of the canal had they not believed it would give them certain and assured competition with the railroads. And having learned this, he must listen to the arguments of the people in their claim that the canal be kept free in every respect from railroad domination.

"Lumber coming through the canal under free tolls will penetrate the interior of the country 600 miles farther than would be the case if tolls were levied on domestic commerce. Citrus fruits pay over $10 a ton to the railroads for transportation from Los Angeles to New York. Free ships through the canal would bring them for $7 a ton. But if you levy tolls on domestic commerce, and also permit railroad boats to use the canal, no person on the Atlantic coast ever will find out that the existence of the canal has made any difference. This fruits bill will be just as high as they are now.

A DOMESTIC QUESTION.

"The fact is that the question of tolls on domestic commerce through the Panama canal is distinctly a domestic question. It affects the cost of living of every person in the country, and it is in no way a question in which any foreign power has the slightest tangible right to interfere. This the president is bound to learn, if he has not already learned it, and having arrived at this point he will realize that any political party which submits the question of domestic freight rates in the United States to the dictate of a foreign power, or to the decision of an international court of arbitration, by that single act will consign itself to oblivion. Unless Mr. Wilson stands b ythe proposition of free tolls for domestic commerce through the Panama canal, he will endanger his entire administration. And if the Democratic party in congress should repeal the free tolls act, the party would not be returned to power again during the life of any person now living.

"I find it to be a fact, however, that in the United States senate there are men of all political parties, who have seized the supreme importance of free tolls, and the absolute necessity of keeping the railroads out of that waterway. These men say they will stand pat against the movement of the violation of a treaty with Great Britain involved for the very good reason that the treaty-making power of the United States nas no jurisdiction over the question of domestic freight rates. Therefore the section of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and of the treaty which it superceded, dealing with tolls, has no application to tolls on domestic commerce of the United States. The senate, I am sure, will stand pat for free tolls on domestic commerce no matter where the president lands in his study of the question."

WOMEN PLAN TO ERECT NATIONAL CLUB HOUSE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Plans for the erection of a club house to be the national headquarters of club women are under way and national organizations of women are arranging for the funds necessary for the enterprise.

The local branch of the Woman's Federated clubs, it was announced today, already has begun a campaign to insure the success of the undertaking. The Woman's National Rivers and Harbors congress today advertised a meeting for May 16 for the benefit of the proposed club house.

This will be followed by a number of other affairs through which the women expect to stimulate interest.

A proposed headquarters for club women has been advocated for some time and has enlisted many supporters in all sections of the country. It is proposed to establish the club so that visiting club women will find all the comforts of home and be independent of the hotels or boarding houses of Washington when they visit the capital.

HOUSE SPENDS LAST DAY IN DEBATE ON UNDERWOOD TARIFF

Underwood Hopes to See Bill Finally Disposed of by the House in One Week From This Monday

SUGAR AND WOOL ARE BONES OF CONTENTION

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, Declares That Bill Will End Alliance of Wool Growers and Woolen Mills

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A rush of speechmaking on the final day of general debate on the tariff bill made lively proceedings in the house. Most of the members had held back with the aim of getting larger audiences expected with the closing of the general debate and the shifting of consideration of the revision measure to a reading under the five-minute rule beginning tomorrow.

Leader Underwood has not changed his view that the bill should be disposed of in the house within a week from today and that the sugar schedule is not likely to offer much real trouble. He hopes that unless the fight of the anti-free wool advocates spreads, the bill will emerge from the senate substantially in the form in which it stands.

Representative Rainey, of Illinois, who has charge of the agricultural schedule of the bill as a member of the ways and means committee; Representative Murdock, of Kansas, leader of the Progressives, and others of that party and some of the big guns of the Republicans were on today's speaking program.

Mr. Rainey declared that the bill represented the dawn of a new era in the government's fiscal policy, "making lighter the burdens of taxes upon consumers and compelling great wealth to contribute its fair share toward paying the government expenses."

He pointed out that no government that levied an income tax system and given it a fair trial had repealed it.

INCOME TAXES.

"We hake the tax bill largest upon the great incomes and lowest upon the small incomes, taxing 425,000 in all and expecting to collect from them at least $70,000,000.

"He said the tax would reach 126,000 incomes that amount to between $4,000 and $5,000 a year, from which the government expects to collect only $630,000, an average of $5 per income, and would reach 1,000 incomes amounting to more than $1,000,000 each per year, from which a collection of nearly $6,000,000 is expected.

Mr. Rainey said he knew of no swollen fortune which had not been made possible by the favors of government, and that a protective tariff conferred upon protected interests the right not only to levy taxes but to collect and distribute the dividends to the holders of watered stocks.

He declared that the revision would end the alliance between the protected woolen mills of the east and the wool-producing states of the west.

"Tida," he concluded, "is not a free trade bill, but it will fail of its purpose if it does not bring about a freer exchange between the products of this and other countries, each nation, each section producing what it is best adapted to produce and trading its products for the products of other sections and nations."

Democratic Leader Underwood, framer of the new tariff bill, contends that the United States is entirely in that right in the provision of the bill in which foreign nations have protested. The clause which would grant a 5 per cent tariff on goods imported in American vessels and which has caused protests from a number of nations. Mr. Underwood says, is to encourage the building of American ships and he believes it violates no treaty.

The French protest is against the provision that foreign manufacturers and exporters shall submit their books to United States agents when demanded. This clause, Mr. Underwood declares, does not mean that the United States is going to try to learn the secrets of foreign manufacturers, as it would be used only in cases where there is reason to suspect that goods have been undervalued.

Representative Payne defended the Payne -Aldrichtariff law and declared the Underwood bill was a tariff for revenue measure " a signal failure." "If this bill becomes a law as it now stands, the next four years will be years of weary waiting," he said.

"That the proposed bill is a revision downward, I frankly admit," Mr. Payne concluded.

U. S. NOT TO RECOGNIZE CHINESE IMMEDIATELY

Political Unrest in Baby of Republics Makes Recognition Impossible Now

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Political revelopments in China have made it impossible that the United States will immediately recognize the new republic as originally was intended and officials here believe there is no danger of further complicating the delicate situation at Peking as the result of the conclusion of the five-power loan and the friction between Yuan Shi Kai and his cabinet on the one side and the power of the radical party in the assembly on the other.

Although one of the first official announcements by Secretary Bryan was that in addition to withdrawing the United States from participation in the six-power loan negotiations, early recognition was intended, later statements from the White House made it apparent that such recognition was dependent upon the organization of the new government on constitutional lines.

American Charge Williams was instructed nearly two weeks ago to convey recognition to the new republic as soon as those formalities had been complied with. It is said at the state department that the failure of the assembly up to this point to choose a speaker, owing to sharply drawn party issues, is a sufficient obstacle to delay execution of the instructions.

Notwithstanding the advantage that might be gained by immediate recognition, it is believed here that the five-powers party to the new loan will refrain from extending their recognition for the present, even if it was well understood that the consummation of the financial arrangement was one of the conditions precedent to such action. The basis for this belief lies in the fact that the officials here were informed when it was first proposed to extend recognition by the United States, that the other powers must decline to follow that course because the new Chinese government had not been organized, a condition which, apparently, still obtains.

Montenegro Terms Demand Of Europe Cruel and Unjust

LONDON, April 28.—The representative of the Montenegrin government in London received instructions today from Cettinje ordering him to protest formally against the demand by the European powers for the immediate evacuation of Scutari by the Montenegrins which is described by the government of King Nicholas as "unjust and cruel."

The demand of the European powers is couched in the following terms:

"We have the honor to declare collectively to the royal government of Montenegro that the taking of the fortress of Scutari does not any way modify the decision of the European powers relative to the delimitation of the frontiers of northern and northeastern Albania and consequently the city of Scutari must be evacuated with the briefest possible delay and must be handed over t the European powers represented by the commanders of the international naval forces lying before the Montenegrin coast.

"The royal government of Montenegro is invited to give a prompt reply to this communication."

The Montenegrin representative in London, to whom this demand was cabled back from Cettinje, said today:

"I have been ordered by my government to protest formally against this unjust and cruel demand and once more to ask the European powers to examine in a calm manner the vital question of Montenegro's future and to place that nation on an equal footing with the other Balkan allies."

CONTROLLING SYMPTOMS IN DIABETES

A technical medical friend said, "You don't cure liabetes; you make them think they are better and prolong their lives for a while."

Suppose that is true and suppose Mrs. Kline, of San Francisco, a niece of the late U. S. Supreme Justice Stephen J. Field, was not cured when she had gangrenous nails and was given but six months to live when she went on Fulton's Diabetic Compound sixteen years ago? Suppose that a test would still show some sugar and that she has even now to take the compound occasionally to keep well?

And suppose that a professor in one of the Universities of Virginia who was given up with Diabetes in 1889 was still living at last advices in 1912 and had been performing his duties these twenty years and over as the result of this treatment? Are there not thousands of diabetics in the United States who would be delighted to have the same experience and if they can have it don't they owe it to their families?

If you have Diabetes and are middle aged or over you owe it to yourself and family to try Fulton's Diabetic Compound before giving up. It can be had at Frank Edmondson & Bros. 11 North Broad St., and 108 N. Pryor St., Atlanta, Ga.
